ship, build patriotism and love of country... these are responsibilities that make us proud when we succeed, unhappy when we fail... the future of the nation hangs in the balance."

Guests at the orientation session included Dr. Kurt Shroy, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. Kenneth E. Watts, vice president of the board, and trustees Bert Lyon and William J. Hanson. Others were Mayor Albert Isaac, Earl J. Selknap, president of the Torrance Education Association; City Manager Edward J. Ferraro; Fred M. Lisen, moderator of the Torrance Education Advisory Council, and J. Walker Owens, manager of the Torrance Chamber of Commerce. Other community and civic leaders also attended.

... High Rise

The debate anew when he declared he was "convinced this is not a game of poker."

The mayor said he also was convinced that Redondo Beach would have the high rise if Torrance did not have it.

"If that happens, then Torrance will have all the burdens and none of the benefits," he declared.

Lisen then suggested the formation of an "informal committee" of councilmen, homeowners, and other concerned persons to review the high rise and examine possibilities for the development.

COUNCILMAN George Vico began the next round when he told the mayor, "I don't know why your pushing it so hard, it looks like you have part interest in it. If it goes into Redondo, that's fine."

To that, the mayor, looking at Vico, declared the building would "be a monument to your ignorance."

Other councilmen got into the exchange, with most of them expressing views similar to that of David K. Lyman.

"I'M NOT going to sit here and flail this thing to death. We've taken a vote on it and I think it's a complete waste of time (to continue)," Lyman said.

H. T. "Ted" Olson expressed the same view, then said, "If the homeowners come in again, I'll listen."

Ferraro disclosed today's meeting during the lingering debate, but quickly told the council he would not continue with it if the council objected. A vote to endorse the meeting carried 6-1, with Lyman dissenting.

other time, McCabe said, "a requirement probably would have been the only action."

Councilman Kenneth Miller quickly asked M. H. Porter, assistant chief of police, if the three officers would have been asked to resign "at another time." Porter replied, "Under similar circumstances, yes."

Councilmen debated for several minutes before City Manager Edward J. Ferraro declared McCabe's presentation to the council was "improper." Ferraro said the council does not have jurisdiction over the hiring and firing of civil service employees unless the civil service commission has first acted.

The council finally referred the matter to City Attorney Stanley Remelmeyer for a ruling on jurisdiction and procedure in the case.
