Bringing Up Baby.

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5
Copycatting and clowning! Two great traits of the toddler. And who can resist coveting with a toddler . . . dreaming up antics for him to imitate . . . laughing at antics he dreams up himself. But it isn't so funny when your image imitates you and keeps it up . . . repeats a cute trick because it provoked a laugh the first time. Sensible rules on this subject: try not to entertain your baby with antics that won't wear well. Try to discourage (sweetly) too many mischievous pranks.
Handy helpers. Do-it-yourselfers need plenty of practice to perfect self-feeding. Gerber Meat Sticks are made to order for helping hand-to-mouth co-ordination. Nutritious and tasty, too. Made from lean cuts of pork and beef selected by Armour, they're high in protein, low in fat and mildly seasoned to suit the semi-grown-up tastes of toddlers. Equally nutritious and delicious: Gerber Chicken Sticks.
Attention-getter. Trickster toddlers often try the dawdling or "no" routine at mealtime to attract attention. But it's best to ignore these tactics. Thing to do is remove the food, without comment, after a reasonable length of time. He'll soon learn that playing with food will not him naught.
Nutrition note from Dan Gerber. One of the most important jobs of our Research Staff is the evaluation of the vitamin values of various foods. One of these evaluations was to determine the amount of vitamin B<sub>12</sub> in our foods. (That's a vitamin needed for healthy skin, a sound nervous system and the utilization of fats and protein.) To date, 92 Gerber Baby Foods have been tested for this important vitamin. And these tests demonstrate the widespread occurrence of vitamin B<sub>12</sub> in Gerber Baby Foods.
Point to remember: When you buy Gerber, you're sure of your money's worth in nourishment. Gerber® Baby Foods, Box 72, Fremont, Michigan.
