Teacher Notes Revisions in Nurse Training

"Changes in nursing education have been dramatic and swift as in all sciences," stated Mrs. Lauralee S. Boyd, instructor of nursing at El Camino College.

"In the past a nursing student would spend three to five years in training with a major percentage of time devoted to scrubbing and clerical chores. Today, less than three years of education is required without loss of adequate preparation and emphasis is on educating "bed-side" nurses rather than "desk-side" nurses.

MRS. BOYD made these remarks at her first session with the nursing students of El Camino College in their training program at Centinela Hospital. Working with Mrs. Boyd at Centinela Hospital, are two groups of students and two practice teachers from UCLA.

"The students completely enjoy the program and all seem to maintain their enthusiasm," Mrs. Boyd noted. The student-teacher relationship is very profitable, primarily because the instructor works with individuals and preserves an open-door policy for any of the problems the students have.

In Mrs. Boyd's opinion, one of the early mistakes of young nurses is that, while they are good nurses, they may be poor health educators. She feels that being a teacher gives her a chance to bring better qualified nurses into hospitals, and to make student nurses aware of the educational aspects of health. Because of the shortage of nurses Mrs. Boyd strongly recommends that nursing graduates go to community hospitals soon after graduation. In making this recommendation, however, she does not want to discourage students in any way from continuing their education.

Chief phases of nursing taught by Mrs. Boyd are maternal, child nursing and the basic fundamentals of nursing, although she also instructs in related areas.

MRS. BOYD was born in Paducah, Kentucky, and had the ambition to be a nurse from early childhood. She is married and has two children and one sister.

Prior to her arrival at El Camino College in February, 1963, Mrs. Boyd was instructor of nursing at the Los Angeles County General Hospital School of Nursing for two years.

She received her R.N. at Lincoln School for Nursing in New York City. She then attended Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C., before attaining her bachelor's degree in science, public health nurse and master of public health degrees.

FROM 1942-1943, Mrs. Boyd was a staff nurse at Harlem Hospital in New York. During the next six years she worked as a public health nurse with the District of Columbia Health Department. From 1951-52 she was a health educator for the tuberculosis associations of Montgomery County, Md., and Arlington, Va. From 1952 until her arrival in Los Angeles, she worked as instructor and supervisor of nursing at Freedmen's Hospital, Washington, D. C.

J-Students Take Tour Of Studio

Journalism students from three Torrance high schools have taken a tour of Universal City Studio with one of the prettiest guides available.

Miss Tippi Hedren, star of "The Bird" and "Marnie" was hostess for the J-students and their advisors.

Janice Cohn, editor-in-chief of the "North Wind," and Janet Hanson, news editor, represented North High. They were accompanied by Guy R. Old Jr., North High journalism advisor.

Sharon Mondschein, editor of the "Sword and Shield," Robin Roy and Mike Pearcey, represented South High. Roy is associate editor and Pearcey is the school photographer. Instructor Tom Rische also was on tour.

TORRANCE High was represented by Connie Eggleston, editor in chief of the "Torrance News Torch," and Ginny Lahey, editorial page editor.

Students from some 60 Southern California high schools were included in the tour. Visits to Doris Day's dressing room, the sound

School Has Opening for One Student

Scherich's South Bay School, 1108 S. Prospect Ave., Redondo Beach, will have one opening as of Dec. 1, according to Warren Scherich.

Children who attend the school have normal intelligence, but have learning problems. Classes are small in size, usually with six or less students.

Because of the small classes, teachers are able to deal with individual students to aid them in overcoming difficulties.

Information about the school may be secured from Scherich by calling FR 5-0469, or 377-5932.

stage where "The Munsters" sets are located, and sets of several motion pictures and television series, were included.

Professional stunt men staged a saloon brawl for the group, demonstrating the techniques of movie fighting. Closing the day, students previewed two episodes of "Broadside" and staged a press conference with Miss Hedren.
