

New Math Prof Named At PV State

Dean Lyle Gibson announced the appointment this week of Dr. John Gardner as assistant professor of mathematics at California State College at Palos Verdes. Dr. Gardner's excellent background in teaching and research will effectively complement the present faculty, Dean Gibson said.

After completing his undergraduate work at the University of Arizona, Dr. Gardner attended California Institute of Technology where he received his doctorate. He taught at the University of Arizona and has done extensive research at the Seismological Laboratory at Pasadena under the direction of Charles F. Richter, developer of the Richter Scale for measuring the intensity of earthquakes. In addition, he has worked with the Institute of Atmospheric Physics at Tucson, Arizona, under the U.S. Geological Survey at Tucson and Washington, D.C.

During the coming year, Dr. Gardner will divide his time between teaching at California State College at Palos Verdes and a research appointment at UCLA. In addition, he will be assigned to the staff of the computer project which is already under way at California State College at Palos Verdes.

Applications from qualified freshmen and juniors are still being accepted. For further information, contact the Student Affairs Office, California State College at Palos Verdes, 27608 Silver Spur Road, Palos Verdes Peninsula, California (phone: 377-9837).
