We're Building for Next Year the past four years than a vintage bottle of wine. Thus, 1 am well acquainted with another problem the pros face - dealing with an irate owner, or sponsor, as the bowling industry so delicate phrases it rms, pays for the letterin of its firm name and puts out additional money for entry fees, it is not particularly happy to back losers. Even if they are affectionately known as the Mets of the Maplewoods. Perhaps, that's why we were sold outright by the footed the bills last year But I have emphasized our new owners that the sea son has just begun and things may be looking up, despite the fact that we've already lost four out of six games. I lost four out of six games. have found it wise in review ing our record, however, not to be too optimistic. It is bet-

For instance, the ever-

 For instance, the ever-com eam which has bolstered its bench and is being tabbed as he team to beat. Last year's champs, "The Herald" who aren't going to abdicate thethrone without a fight. The throne without a fight. The oursome, steadily climbing p the ladder with both depth in veterans and a couple of raw rookies who may come through. And so it goes.

We feel (our team of Rena, o and Mary Ann) that this is not the time to point out to the sponsor that we have high handicap, because I'm certain that in sponsoring us he feels he has one, too. In fact, the only phrase which seems halfway appropriate is to tell him, "We're rebuild ing for next year."

What sweeter words to a sponsor in the construction
