

He's Ideal Example Of Road's Three C's

In a field where many Americans have serious shortcomings, Jack Fields can be called an expert. With 19 years of driving without an accident under his seat belt, he rates as a man in the know when it comes to automobile safety.

Fields, a PBX installer for Pacific Telephone who lives in Torrance, is an ideal example of how the utility's defensive driving program reduces traffic accidents.

Motor vehicle and all other forms of accidents are currently the targets of Pacific's "Safety Action Week," which runs through Friday. The campaign is designed to reduce the staggering toll of lives taken in accidents each year in the United States.

DEFENSIVE DRIVING is simply a system of operating an automobile which stresses that a careful driver doesn't commit any errors and makes allowance for the lack of skill or judgment on the part of others.

"Defensive driving has been a valuable tool for me in improving my driving skills," Fields said. "It has taught me that driving is a second full-time job, whether it's for work or pleasure."

Fields credits his long span of time without even as much as a crumpled fender to defensive driving, which relies on the Three C's — Courtesy, Control, and Concentration.

INSTRUCTORS of Pacific's driving program point out that the defensive driver is not caught in that last-minute futile attempt to avoid an accident. Employees are taught that it is important to have control of the vehicle but also of emotions and temper. Defensive driving teaches the motorist to concentrate, not only on what he is doing, but on what other drivers surrounding him are doing as well. Such concentration allows a driver to anticipate a potential accident situation and avoid it.
