

Occupation--Group Coordinator

Periodically someone will do an article designed to boost the morale of housewives by listing all of the jobs we do, and how much it would cost per hour if your husband had to pay a regular laundress, cook, chauffeur, scullery maid, etc., to perform these chores.

I suppose the authors mean well, because it always turns out we're shamefully underpaid, but yet I'm not fond of seeing in print my household tasks described in such menial terms.

Not in these days, anyway, when street cleaners are known as Sanitation Experts and garbage collectors as Disposal Technicians. From now on I'm calling myself a Nutritionist instead of a cook and a Maintenance Engineer instead of a combination upstairs and downstairs maid and cleaning woman.

Moreover, I've never seen a complete tabulation of the jobs expected of wives and mothers. If so, you'd find them listed in the Help Wanted section as follows:

CREDIT MANAGER—Honest but not always solvent firm looking for executive experienced in appeasing belligerent creditors each month. Helpful if able to balance household accounts, although not vital.

TRANSPORTATION DISPATCHER—Two-car "taxi" company needs person to handle its pickup and delivery service between schools, bus depots, and other outlying points and home.

BUYER—Large and still growing firm seeking purchasing agent experienced in dealing in volume amounts, especially at the supermarket. Prefer applicant to be able to wheel grocery carts with one or more kids inside.

FASHION CONSULTANT—Position open for advisor on teen-age styles. Must read regularly Glamour, Vogue, Seventeen, and Mademoiselle magazines. Must be prepared to accept fact that advice will never be taken.

PUBLIC RELATIONS EXPERT—Challenging position awaits executive trained in promoting attributes of firm's own children in dealing with other parents whose kids regularly make the honor roll.

SOCIAL SECRETARY—Busy firm looking for combination receptionist and PBX operator to keep track of social obligations of clients.

ATTENTION: Lonely Hearts—Harassed wife and mother of seven seeking diversion in big city. Would like to have candlelight dinner with member of opposite sex, preferably her husband. Will go dutch.
