Two Models Remain at Park South

The sudden onslaught of spring weather, which saw Los Angeles temperatures soar into the 90s, has created a flurry of buyer interest at Park South, a multi-million dollar housing development halfway between the beach and the Los Angeles civic center.

According to Reed Clark, in charge of sales at Park South, easy access to the development, located near the Harbor and San Diego Freeway interchange plus news from Sacramento that work can proceed on the planned Dominguez Hills College adjacent to the tract, is resulting in heavy foot traffic through Park South.

Clark said the families with teenagers and college age youngsters are finding the development ideally suited to them, as a large recreational area with Olympic size swimming pool and a club house is being completed next to Park South and will be ready for public use by summer time.

$ $ $ RUBBISH $ $ $

Powerful rubbish collection interests have put up a puppet candidate for mayor (Nick Drale) and are pouring thousands of dollars into his campaign. Their objective is to get a monopoly on residential rubbish collection (30,000 homes), a million-dollar-a-year plum! Then watch your rates go up!

MAYOR ALBERT ISEN has firmly opposed all attempts of the rubbish interests to take over this municipal service. And that is why so much rubbish money is going into his opponent's campaign. HELP YOUR MAYOR prevent a rubbish monopoly in Torrance.
