

Civic Symphony Presentation of 'Aida' Receives Warm Responses

"When we have such a fine and a pleasant manner. He looking, but his work was seemed overly modest, however, on his first entrance. He stood too far back on the stage, where, unfortunately, a shadow concealed his fine physique and handsome, expressive features. He made a great Rhadames. At the close of the opera the audience gave tremendous applause to the conductor and then to all, calling them back again and again and acting as though they were very reluctant to let it come to an end.— Vera Mills

THE PARTS of Il Re and Ramfis were assigned to Alessandro Spardi. They were well sung and he is very good end.
