Law in Action

Heirs sometimes sue for a part or for a bigger part of an estate.

To discourage such suits, one may have to omit certain relatives on purpose, and add that anyone contesting his will successfully will get only one dollar from his estate, for his trouble.

These clauses slow down but do not stop will contests, For example, when he died, Sam wanted Lucy, his wife, to to get one half; and his sisters, the other half of his apartment house. To forestall litigation, his will said that anyone who contested the will should get only one dollar.

In any event, a testator who disinherits his spouse and children must at least name them in his spouse and children must at least name them in his will to show he has not in fact forgotten them Otherwise they may sue the estate with a good chance of winning some part of it.

An heir may sue to have the testator had died without a will. Although it is hard to do, the heir may prove that the testator was incompetent, apartment house. To forestall undue influence.

Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.

UNDER THE will Lucy could keep the place but could not sell it merely to give his sisters their half. Instead, if she wanted, Lucy could buy them out by giving them a non-interest bearing note for their half and by paying it off in easy pay.

"Americans keep getting

Well, Sam died, and Lucy thought a few dollars a month would do to buy the place, but the sisters wanted more. They asked the court to give them larger payments. In reply, Lucy denounced their suit as a "will contest." She said Sam's sisters for "contesting" his will, abould get only the oned ollar as his will called for.

The court, however, ruled for the sisters. They were not contesting the will, the judge said; they were merely asking for a court to interpret the will.

WITH FEW exceptions. a percon can will away his wealth as he likes. Often to save death taxes, he may well have given his heirs gifts during his life time, and therefore may not have wanted them to receive much when he dies.

"Americans keep getting fatter and flabbier as our machine soiety gets more and more streamlined." Mrs. Murtiel Grossfeld told North High as part of a four to promote "Club for a tour to promot
