

It's Time to Get Out-of-Doors Again

LUCKY ANGLERS . . . California fishermen braved the cool air of the High Sierras during the past weekend for the statewide opening of trout season. These lucky anglers have just netted a big one, a scene that wasn't repeated often enough for most fishermen because of the inclement weather.

Wily Trout Luring Local Anglers to High Sierras

By FRANK L. TREZISE
California trout fishermen braved the cool air of the High Sierras last weekend for the opening of the trout season.

Although the sun has softened up much of the snow and ice on the high lakes, many are still completely frozen over. Open lakes are Grant, Silver, Crowley, Bridgeport, and Twin Lakes. Much of the back country is still covered with snow and it will be June before most of these sections will be open.

The Kern River above Kernville has been stocked and fishing should continue good in that area. The Merced River just outside the Yosemite Park line is producing some good catches of rainbows.

Local anglers should have good catches as a result of warming weather, and the stocking of catchable rainbows in Little Rock Reservoir, San Gabriel River, Silverado Creek, and Trabuco Creek.

In San Bernardino County, Doane Pond, San Luis Rey River, and the Santa Margarita River have also been stocked.
