Funeral Processions on Freeways to Be Studied

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has asked the Greater Los Angeles Chapter of the National Safety Council to study and report on the problem of funeral processions on the freeways.

"In my opinion, long funeral processions on the freeways create a hazard to other motorists," Hahn said.

"These processions, which often include 20 to 30 automobiles at close intervals, travel in the outside lane of the freeway and virtually block off and on ramps as they pass by."

The situation becomes particularly dangerous when a driver trying to exit from the freeway cannot move from the second lane to the outside because he would break into the funeral column, the supervisor added.

"The driver is faced with two alternatives: speeding up excessively to reach the head of the procession and then cutting across to his off ramp; or slowing down in the second lane to let the procession pass, thereby causing traffic to back up behind him and a possible chain reaction of rear-end crashes."
