For Microwave Tower Design

Los Angeles Beautiful has honored Pacific Telephone Co. for its role in making the city a more attractive community.

Gordon L. Hough, vice president and general manager of the utility, accepted a certificate from Los Angeles Beautiful at a regular monthly meeting of the group.

Pacific Telephone was honored by the civic group for its distinctive microwave tower, which is perched atop a company building at 420 South Grand Ave. in downtown Los Angeles.

Police also received a burglary report from Doral Longacre of 3340 W. 182nd St. Longacre's home was entered Aug. 14, while he and his family were vacationing. The report listed two piggy banks, containing $25, and 12 fifths of liquor as missing. Also stolen, Longacre said, were a transistor radio, a flash camera, a necklace and earring set, and clothing.

Trucks Speed Here With Text Books for Schools

Joining the vacation-bound tourists jamming the highways from Sacramento to Torrance this week are several trucks headed for the cafeteria of a local elementary school.

The vehicles are delivery trucks for the State Department of Education; and their destination is Torrance Elementary School, which is serving as an overflow warehouse for the Educational Materials Building as newly-issued state textbooks flow in by the ton.

To date more than 1,000 cartons weighing 26 tons have arrived—and more are on their way.

INCLUDED in the shipment are modern math textbooks which have just been published for third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and eighth grades; a new set of social science books for fourth grade which emphasizes the history and geography of the state of California and replacements for worn-out spellers. A shipment of readers is expected momentarily from a San Francisco publisher's warehouse.

Each year the number of newly-issued state texts far exceeds the number of books ordered to allow for growth in enrollment and worn-out texts, according to Neil Lewis, director of the Educational Materials Building.

Lewis is in charge of distributing the books once they arrive in Torrance to the teachers who will be needing them this September.

THE PROJECT of unpacking what will total close to 80,000 pounds of books, counting them, dividing them up to fill orders placed by teachers last June, and shipping them in district trucks to 34 elementary schools will take about three weeks. By the end of August, Lewis expects all books needed for the start of school to be waiting for returning teachers at their schools.

In addition to the newly-issued state texts, the EMB trucks will deliver library books and audio-visual materials ordered by teachers for their fall classes.

But the district trucks are not returning to the EMB empty-handed. They are filled with seasonal cargo—the no-longer-needed summer school materials.

HUNGRY SHOPPERS A survey indicates that women who had not eaten for five hours prior to their weekly shopping tour spent an average of $5.76 more than usual!
