

It Heats, It Cools, It Cleans

A chill in the bathroom? Don't run for the furnace room — just move up the thermostat and stay where you are. Flameless electric home heating will do the rest.

Summer got you all steamed up? Turn on the air conditioning and breathe cool, clean air.

Got 12 to cook for? Do it electrically. Set the dial on your flameless electric range and it will turn up the heat on the stew and turn it off when company's ready. Spills in the oven? Forget it; many electric ovens can clean themselves.

Dry air? Humidify it—electrically of course.

Dirty dishes—get them out of the sink and into the dishwasher—pots and pans too.

You could be running a restaurant and no one would know it.

Is the baby awake? Keep the intercom on; it will let you know.

You can open your garage door from your kitchen, flood your yard with light or melt the snow off your sidewalk. Do just about anything electrically.

Planning To Remodel

Bathrooms are for people, not fixtures. Planning a bathroom just large enough to accommodate the plumbing is really false economy; because of the fixtures and materials used, the square-foot cost of a bathroom is relatively high.

Allowing for a few more feet in a bathroom can add greatly to its functional quality and provide the opportunity for greater decorative appeal as well.

Compartmenting a bath pays off in convenience. Adequate storage requires extra space, but is well worth it. And some luxury touches, such as a vanity counter, a planting area and a spot to lounge restore to modern bathrooms the glamour of the Romans.
