

Health Leaflets Now Available

Thrifty Drug Stores throughout the Los Angeles area will begin distribution this month of more than 100,000 leaflets on behalf of the County Health Department's Immunization Program for children.

The brochures, explaining the importance of proper immunization of young children against polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough will be distributed as a public service at all of the 160 Thrifty Drug Stores in Los Angeles County, according to Manny Bort, Thrifty Drug's executive president.

Thrifty Drug Stores is commending the company for its outstanding community spirit in offering to aid the immunization program.

Gerald A. Heidbreder, Los Angeles County Health Officer, said, "The cooperation of Thrifty Drug Stores will provide the Health Department with an important assist in communicating with those parents in the county whose children have yet to be immunized."

The immunization program is a long range project sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service and administered locally by the Los Angeles County Health Department.

"Since the inception of the program more than a year ago," Dr. Heidbreder pointed out, "the number of children who have received protection against polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough has increased significantly."

"However," he warned, "there remain large numbers of young children, especially pre-school age children, who are still vulnerable to the ravages of these four dangerous diseases since they have not been adequately immunized."

Dr. Heidbreder urged all parents whose children have not been immunized recently to visit their family doctor or local county health center to start their youngsters on the immunization protection they need.
