Dressed in Indian costume and seated in a semi-circle, third grade students of Miss Jean Horne at Arlington School, concluded a month-long study of American Indians with an "Indian Day."

Indian symbols and numbers were used by students for the day's language and mathematics work. A luncheon of Indian food highlighted the observance.

During the six-week study each child completed a notebook on Indian lore, made Indian pottery, did an Indian sandpainting, and drew up charts of famous Indians from Pocahontas to Jim Thorpe, and learned an Indian dance.
