

Bike Safety Program Set For Monday

A representative of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department will discuss bicycle safety Monday at the Lomita Recreation Center. The program, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m., is one of several activities being planned for a newly organized Bicycle Club. Slides will be shown during the program. Youngsters also will be able to register their bicycles during the morning.

Law in Action

In this day of easy travel, residents of the state often have business or go on vacations in other states. Suppose a Californian goes to Nevada or New York and runs up a bill, breaks a law, or gets into an accident in that state. Do the laws of the other state apply to the Californian upon his return?

As a rule, yes. Under the U. S. Constitution each state must give "full faith and credit to the laws and judgments of the several states." A court judgement made in one state will be enforced in other states. And auto accidents generally can be tried in the state where the injury took place even though the parties live elsewhere. Similarly, persons accused of crimes in one state who escape to another state can still be extradited in proper proceedings through the governor's office.

STILL, EACH state can pursue its own "public policies," and in doing so, deny enforcement of another state's laws. One state may refuse to enforce the laws of another state when it has a special interest of its own to protect. Yet most legal rights that arise in one state can be enforced in another state.

In a recent case the owner of a licensed gambling casino in Puerto Rico, which is a part of the United States, gave Smith $12,000 worth of credit. He lost it gambling. Smith went back to New York and the casino sued him when he failed to pay up. The lower court refused to enforce the debt since New York has a strong public policy against gambling.

The Appellate court, however, reversed. It said that enforcing a gambling debt valid in Puerto Rico does not offend New York's public policy. New York courts should not refuse to enforce the casino's rights.

FOR YEARS the courts of one state would refuse to enforce other states tax laws. They were said to be "penal" and one state does not enforce the criminal laws of another. Today, however, most states have reciprocal agreements to enforce each others tax laws.

Newest Jet Unveiled in Long Beach

The first Series 30 DC-9 jetliner was rolled off the production line Monday, Douglas Aircraft Co. officials announced this week.

Plans are made for initial flight tests to begin before the end of the month. The new jet is a modified, larger version of the Series 10 DC-9, which began regular service last December.

Douglas Aircraft facilities in Torrance and Long Beach are engaged in production work for the new plane.
