

COLLEGE REPORT

By ROBERT M. BERSI

Assistant to the President
California State College, Dominguez Hills

The spring of the year means different things to different people. To young students planning to continue their education, it means a time of final decision as to which college or university they will attend.

It seems appropriate, therefore to devote some effort to an explanation of what the new campus at Dominguez Hills has to offer.

A single statement which best describes the philosophy of the new campus would be as follows: The academic plan for the California State College, Dominguez Hills, grew out of several basic assumptions. The most important of these is the conviction that the best preparation that a student may obtain during his undergraduate years—for graduate study, for practical preparation for a life's work, or for whatever future plans he may hold—lies in a broad education in the liberal arts and sciences.

GUIDED by this principle, our curriculum plan avoids specialized training and undergraduate professional education. Courses in such fields as business education, dramatic arts, and engineering, for example, will be designed and taught within the liberal arts and sciences framework that characterizes the unique undergraduate program of the college.

An undergraduate takes about 40 per cent of his work in a basic studies program covering fundamental problems in all fields of knowledge. The basic studies program is a series of specially designed courses required of all students. Undergraduates are further required to have two major fields of concentration, each taking about 20 per cent of their time. One of these majors will be in a departmental field (such as "history" or "physics") and the other in an interdisciplinary field (such as "earth and space sciences" or "American business and economic systems").

In addition to the basic studies program, the departmental major, and the interdisciplinary major, each student will take electives for greater enrichment in general education, greater depth in specialized studies, and the start of professional sequences (for example, teacher education), as needed.

Students in the Small College will be permitted to enroll for courses on campus outside of the Small College. The number of such courses will naturally differ with each individual program. Small College courses will be closed to students not registered in the Small College. Since the three-year B.A. program is to be tailor-made for each student, no transfer students will be admitted into the Small College.

Dogs Not So Friendly In State Campgrounds

Capital News Service

SACRAMENTO—Man's best friend is having a hard time proving that he can remain that way when permitted to stay overnight in state parks.

The Department of Parks and Recreation has reported on the first three months of operation under the new "Dog Rule," which permits the canines to be kept overnight in the parks for the first time in 22 years.

"The reaction to dogs over-nighting it in our state parks is generally good—from dog owners, that is," the department said. "From non-dog owners, the reactions are not so good."

Boys, Girls May Join Canteen

Trips, dances, and parties are in store for boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 14 who join the Youth Activity Canteen at the Loma Recreation Center. In order to become members, youngsters may fill out membership blanks and submit them to the YAC executive board for approval.

Future activities include trips to Disneyland, Marineland, Griffith Park, and Irvine Park. Members are also planning hayrides and outings to baseball games, movie studios, and television programs.

YAC meets every Friday night from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Loma Recreation Center Gymnasium, 24428 Eschelman Ave.

Assignment TV

By TERENCE O'FLAHERTY

On the March 22 Bell Telephone Hour six of the finest artists of our time concluded a highly civilized concert with what you may have thought was the sextet from "Lucia." Actually they were singing "The Swan-song" from "The Nielsen Report" because AT&T is cancelling the series after the next installment.

"This year has been a disaster for us," said phone company spokesman Louis K. O'Leary. "We're convinced there are 12 million people out there who like the series but getting, at times, only 4 or 5 million against an old movie was a rude shock."

Perhaps it should be observed that when a sponsor puts on a program of limited audience appeal, he shouldn't be shocked when it attracts a limited audience. It is becoming increasingly evident that the high cost of quality programming in a quantity-conscious medium can be met only by large corporations which are more concerned with creating a distinguished public image than attracting a massive audience.

THE TELEPHONE company has done more than its share in this area—possibly because of a guilt complex for running a non-competitive enterprise—but it must be congratulated for its bravery regardless of the motive. Bell won't completely sever its 28-year-old ties with good music. Next fall it will sponsor a 30-minute Sunday evening radio broadcast on NBC presenting tapes of famous past concerts of the Telephone Hour including interviews with performing artists.

Bell's television activities next fall consist of a series of four NBC-TV reports on the urban crisis and three entertainment specials.

WHEN BELL started its current behind-scenes look at the world of serious music, its spokesmen insisted they were not concerned with large audience. Some executives claim disappointment in ratings was less of a factor in the format change than a reflection of the company's concern with the need for city improvement.

The 1,100 happy families who play the Nielsen Guessing Game may be short on interest in good music but they surprised the entire television industry by placing a documentary on "The Amazon" in the Number One position for two weeks ending March 3. "Non-fiction" television is not usually preferred by these people whose tastes determine the TV menu for 100 million Americans. Following, in order of Top Ten popularity, were: "Family Affair," "Andy Griffith," "Bonanza," Saturday movie, "Gunsmoke," "Lucy," "Gomer Pyle," "The Virginian" and Red Skelton.

IN THE LATE-night-variety rat-race Nielsen shows Joey Bishop is gaining on Johnny Carson. Bishop has 23 per cent of the audience, Carson 27.

Composer Most Likely To Roll Over: Cole Porter—whose "Kiss Me Kate" was over-rocked and under-rehearsed but still managed to Show To Date: NBC's "Ice Capades" transformed by top television designer James Trittupo into a theatrical delight for viewers . . . Not Quite the Greatest Shows on Earth: The telecasts of Barnum-Bailey-Ringling Brothers Circus with Mike Douglas and "Jack Benny's Carnival Nights"—a side show of big names at their second best with Benny as a walk-on.

Youthful Journalist Honored

Barbara Moffett, a Torrance High School girl, captured first place trophy in newswriting at the 15th annual Press Day at El Camino College. More than 300 area high school journalists participated, sponsored by the college photo-journalism department.

Among contest judges was Reid Bundy, co-publisher of the Press-Herald.

Featured speaker at the opening ceremonies was Leonard Wibberly, author of "The Mouse That Roared" and a former news reporter and foreign correspondent.

The poor, misunderstood extension telephone.

What it is, what it isn't.

It is a second telephone in your home.

It isn't paying for a separate line into your house. Or paying for a separate number.

And it isn't paying a double telephone bill.

What it is is merely an extension from your present phone. And if you have to dash through the house or scramble downstairs to say out-of-breath hellos, it's something you need.

It's not even a sensational new fad—by now four out of ten homes in America already have an extension phone.

And the average family takes over 400 incoming calls a year on it, and uses it for at least that many outgoing calls.

Last of all, it wouldn't cost much to try one for a couple of months, and this would tell you everything.

Whether it is, or isn't, for you.
