(Continued from Page A-1) urban renewal and called for the impeachment of all those City Councilmen who voted for the Meadow Park redevelopment project. He thinks the people should have been allowed to vote on the project first, stating that he will support private enterprise in the area, if elected.

Salsbury also said he favors repeal of the local Uniform Housing Code because this issue will give the people a chance to express their opposition to urban renewal.

Incumbent David K. Lyman, an attorney, spoke of the great progress Torrance has seen in the past few years, urging voters to return present councilmen if they are satisfied with this growth.

Lyman stated that the City Council has voted to lower taxes and to improve police facilities, noting that the Del Amo Financial Center has come into its own during the past few years. He and other City Councilmen have worked hard, he said, to encourage and assist new corporations coming into the area.

Candidate Max Kelly criticized the City Council for vetoing the recommendations of city commissions "in less than five minutes" after commissions have spent months preparing these recommendations.

The North High history teacher called for cooperation between school and city recreation officials in providing additional playground facilities for area young people. Real estate agent Orin P. (Bud) Johnson termed himself the "best qualified candidate" through the knowledge he gained as assistant city manager of Torrance.

Johnson wants to end the "four-man bloc" which he believes dictates many City Council decisions. Two of the three incumbents are part of this bloc, he claimed. The candidate would like to replace the city manager form of government with a strong mayor set-up.

Youngest candidate, Rocque R. (Rocky) Garcia, said city government is a "challenge to the pride" of the citizens of Torrance. He called for modernization of the City Charter and suggested that an "ombudsman" be appointed as liaison between Torrance citizens and their government. Garcia also believes there should be restrictions on councilmen's travel expenses.

Former City Councilman Nick Draie is seeking re-election. Draie believes that the city bus system should be retained and improved, not sold, as the City Council has been contemplating.

The real estate and insurance agent advocates opening a four-year state college in Torrance, combating the narcotics problem, and working for civic beautification.

Another insurance man, Blayne L. Asher, concluded the evening's presentations. Asher has made an issue of the proposed councilmen's pay raise, criticizing the amount of money councilmen spend on after-meeting dinners.

He also opposes the pay raise on grounds that councilmen now are paid a total of $60 per week for their urban redevelopment meetings which may last no more than five minutes.

Asher also opposes the urban redevelopment project, stating that the Meadow Park property should be sold out-right to private enterprise.

Incumbent George Vico was unable to attend the meeting.

...Charges

The incumbent councilman also termed "totally and absolutely untrue" the mayor's comment that Lyman has reportedly spent "around $35,000" in his bid two years ago for the State Senate. His expense statement is a matter of public record, he said.

LYMAN has been calling for the election of each of the three incumbents Tuesday.

Another incumbent, Councilman Edward J. Talbert, protested when Isen's eleventh-hour letter accused him of lying about his vote for a 10-cent city tax cut.

At the Wednesday night candidates meeting and again yesterday Talbert displayed copies of Ordinance 1800 which adopted the tax cut on Aug. 22, 1967. Talbert did cast a vote for the cut just as he has claimed. He had taken his seat on the Council the first Tuesday of that month, he said.

Johnson defended use of excerpted comments from letters and Press-Herald editorials in his political advertising.

"The advertising was properly prepared and was not out of context," Johnson said.

City Manager Ferraro told the Press-Herald his quoted comments came from a letter drafted by Johnson himself to be used to seek employment after he was dismissed as assistant city manager early in 1966.

"I CHOSE the quotations because they paraphrase what I've been saying about my qualifications throughout the campaign," Johnson said. "I merely used them to substantiate what I've been saying, that I have the experience and am qualified for the office I seek."

He denied that the comments should be construed as an endorsement.

Chamber Manager Owens, in protesting use of excerpts from a letter he wrote when Johnson was seeking employment elsewhere, demanded an apology, pointing out his profession as a Chamber of Commerce executive required that he stay aloof from political campaigns.

This last candle is held in place by the Hearse, a special candle holder fashioned from the trunk of the Christmas tree.

Sets Meeting

Earl E. Dicknoether, manager of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce in Canada, will be guest speaker Tuesday at the luncheon meeting of the Torrance Del Amo Rotary Club to be held at Howard Johnson's.

Dicknoether promoted Canada's first bloodless bullfight, which cost the Lindsay, Ontario, Chamber of Commerce $10,000.

THE NAVY will be well in evidence from other entries already accepted by Edwin Sullivan, parade coordinator and assistant manager of the Chamber of Commerce, along with representative marching units from ships afloat at parade time. The Talos float and ASROC-SUBROC float have been entered by the Weapons Station, Seal Beach. A Firebee Target float will come from the Pacific Missile Range at Point Mugu.

The Recruiting Service will provide a 61-foot float of the USS Baltimore. Precision drill teams are entered by the Naval Training Center, San Diego, and Naval School Command, Mare Island, Vallejo. The northern team won outstanding entry and best military drill team honors last year.

This year these Navy entries and those of all branches of the Armed Forces, reserves, National Guard, military displays, ROTC units, and college and high school bands will be reviewed by Lt. General James K. Woolnough, grand marshal of the parade.

Holdup Suspects Pedal Pushers Surrender to Local Police

A second suspect in a Phoenix, Ariz., armed robbery has surrendered to Torrance police. He is William C. McCarter, 33, of 1635 Pacific Coast Hwy., Harbor City.

McCarter's alleged partner in the robbery, Jack Wayne Lee, had surrendered last March 31.

Both have waived extradition and will be returned to Arizona to stand trial. They are charged with the March 11 holdup of a Phoenix shoe store, during which $1,000 was taken.

and Commanding General U.S. Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va.

For the ninth consecutive year this patriotic event, part of a nationwide program, is sponsored by the city of Torrance Area Chamber of Commerce. George S. Wing is general chairman.

Has plan to convert Meadow Park Federal Renewal Project to private enterprise!

Torrance, California, Sunday, March 24, 1968

For Leo F. X. Salisbury

For several years we have watched with admiration the efforts of Leo F. X. Salisbury to improve the community in which he and his family live and in which he is active as an independent businessman.

Frankly, we have been impressed. Mr. Salisbury has demonstrated an unbounding enthusiasm for the many projects in which he has an interest.

He is a vigorous businessman, served with distinction as a member of the city's Planning Commission, and was singularly responsible for the formation of a merchants sign committee to fight city-sponsored proposals to impose drastic restrictions on business signs in Torrance.

In this latter battle, incidentally, Mr. Salisbury appears to be near victory as the City Council committee named to study the problem has shown a general agreement with his proposals and in some cases appear to take a more liberal approach to sign restrictions. The Press-Herald is convinced that Mr. Salisbury would make a competent city councilman and that he has energy and talents which the city could use to its advantage.

The Press-Herald recommends that Leo F. X. Salisbury be elected to the City Council on April 9.
