

ANN LANDERS

Don't Hire Her Again

Dear Ann Landers: I have been told I am critical, hard-headed, unsympathetic and a perfectionist. If you agree I will apologize in the front window of Macy's department store next Saturday at high noon.

I saw fit to criticize the sifter because she'd:

- (1) Dug huge chunks out of a ham which I had planned to serve to my bridge club.
- (2) Ate nearly one-third of a coconut custard pie which had not been cut into.
- (3) Left a permanent ring on top of the TV when she set down a wet glass.
- (4) Burned a small hole in an upholstered chair. (Cigarette, of course.)
- (5) Talked on the phone for one hour and 20 minutes and made it impossible for me to reach the house.

Comment, please.—SCARSDALE

Dear Scar: If you hire this girl to sit for you again you have holes in your head, Woman.

Dear Ann Landers: Zelda and I have been married for three years. She is a lively girl and always had a lot more energy than I have.

About six months ago my brother Dick started to take Zelda to the movies, bowling and a few other places because I was too tired. Last week Dick, who is a salesman, asked Zelda if she wanted to go on the road with him for a few days. She asked me if it was O.K. and I said yes, so she went. They got back yesterday and Zelda said she had a groovy time. She wants to go again soon.

A guy at work told me I must be crazy to allow this. I think he has a dirty mind. I talked it over with my mother and she said it was perfectly all right because Dick is a blood relative. Do you agree?—QUESTIONS RAISED

Dear Q.R.: Sure, Dick is a blood relative. But he's YOUR blood relative, not Zelda's, dummy. Put an end to this chumminess or you might wind up being your own brother-in-law. If Dick wants a female companion on his trips suggest that he find a nice single girl—and marry her.

Dear Ann Landers: What would you do if you were 16 years old and your mother kept harping on how important it is to be a good girl and choose your friends carefully and have high standards and make the boys respect you and then you find out that SHE wasn't such a good girl when she was 16.

Her standards couldn't have been very high and she wasn't very careful about her choice of friends because she had a baby out of wedlock.

Would you obey her or would you laugh at her?—BUFFALO TEEN

Dear Buffalo Teen: The choice is yours, but you know what sometimes happens to people who laugh when there is nothing funny. Someone usually drops a butterfly net over them.

Did it occur to you that your mother loves you enough so that she doesn't want you to go through the hell she experienced when she was your age? It may well be that HER mother didn't tell her anything and she had to pay an enormous price for her ignorance. If you disregard your mother's advice on the grounds that she is a poor example you are making a big mistake. She may be the BEST example after all.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request $1 in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Give in or lose him! . . . when a guy gives you this line, look out! For tips on how to handle the super sex salesman, check Ann Landers' booklet, "Hooking And Peeking—What Are The Limits?" Master Teachers Guide Pilot Training Program

By DOUG HUFF
Press-Herald Staff Writer

With a pilot group of six students, Cal-State, Dominguez Hills has launched what may become one of the most outstanding one year graduate teacher training programs in the state college system.

Under the guidance of Dr. Ruth Martinson, professor of education and psychology, the six students have been placed in area elementary and secondary schools with carefully selected "master teachers" to serve as active participants in a classroom.

Dr. Martinson selected the master teachers, whom she defines as teachers who have demonstrated outstanding competence and reliability in their classroom and conduct meaningful activities to help their students learn.

DURING THE past year she visited the teachers selected in the Palos Verdes, Manhattan Beach, and Compton Union High School District.

As a participant in the college program, each of the master teachers serves as adjunct faculty member of Cal-State and participates in the program helping to evaluate the graduate student.

They also take part in the student seminars as "resources." The seminar meets once a week during the semester on Monday at noon. Dr. Martinson also takes part in the student evaluation through visitation to the classroom.

THE STUDENTS in the program are carefully screened by a Cal State faculty committee which sets policy. On the committee are Dr. Solomon Marmor, assistant professor of chemistry; Dr. Stephen Brown, assistant professor of psychology; David Hudson, coordinator of audio visual services and lecturer in geology and education; Mrs. Frances Steiner, assistant professor of music; Dr. Quinton Stodola, assistant professor of psychology and director of counseling and financial aid; and Dr. Martinson.

During the winter quarter the selected students take academic courses, half of them in general subjects. During the spring quarter more time is devoted to classroom situations with the master teacher and less time to course work.

However, if Dr. Martinson and the master teacher assigned to the student feel the student is progressing well enough, the amount of time spent as a teacher aide will be increased. "We don't have a fixed time for this," she noted.

Other school districts also will be involved in the program. The districts presently involved were selected partly for convenience of the students.

Students participating in the pilot program are Pam Striplen, one of the first four graduates of CSCDH; Barbara Wood and Virginia Finnegan, both of whom previously attended CSCDH but received their degrees elsewhere; Lucienne Bowes, graduate of Russell Sage College in New York; Faye Hollins, a Pepperdine College grad; and Gayle Uyeno, a Long Beach State grad.

"NOT ONLY do they learn how to teach effectively but they also have an opportunity for a retrospective study of master teachers," Dr. Martinson said.

"A master teacher is crucially important and probably the most important single individual in the preparation of teachers," she commented.

While the Cal-State program started out small this year, it is planned to enlarge it next fall and the Cal-State teacher education program will have three full time members.

Presently some of the courses in the program are taught by general faculty members who are specialists in their academic field and have knowledge in public school education.

INSTEAD of setting up a separate department of education, the college has sought to involve the entire school to avoid making it competitive for funds with other divisions.

Deadline Tomorrow for Veteran's Exemptions

Veterans who plan to file for their property tax exemption must do so by tomorrow, Assessor Philip E. Watson said today.

Claims may be filed in person at any of the assessor's regional offices or in Room 225 of the Hall of Administration up to 5 p.m. tomorrow. If veterans mail their returns, they must bear an April 15 postmark or the claim cannot be accepted.

A veteran who is filing for the first time must appear in person at any assessor's office, bringing with him a copy of his honorable discharge and, if he owns real property, his deed or other proof of ownership.

To be eligible for the exemption — which allows a $1,000 reduction in assessed value — the veteran must either have been a resident of California as of Nov. 3, 1964, or have entered the service from California. His property ownership is limited to less than $5,000 if single or $10,000 if married. All claims must be signed.

Watson's speech, entitled, "To Assess or Not to Assess: That is the Question," will deal with the growing complexities his office is facing in the property taxation field. Tomorrow evening's meeting will begin at 7 p.m.

Shrine Club Will Meet In Torrance

A Woman's Work Should Always Be Done at Home

I'm sure by now that you, my faithful readers, know how I feel about working wives, and how sorry I am that so many of you choose to work outside the home.

The rise in juvenile delinquency is always the fault of a mother, if she works, and I foresee a bad future for so many of you mothers.

As a sad example, there was the hostess at a restaurant in friend, or over to the friend's house for dinner. By the time "father gets home," it may be too late for either.

Perhaps she asked to do something she should not be permitted to do, anyway.

But you can bet that when "father gets home" he will probably let daughter dear do it anyway because it's easier than the usual argument daughter will put up.

Too many American mothers think that once the baby gets out of the bib and toilet training stage your job is over. Don't you believe it. A youngster starting into the teens needs mother's guidance, advice and help even more. These are their confused years.

During these years you particularly belong with your children and should be home when they return from school. With no distracting outside job, you have more time and patience to observe them, to study their moods and head off any problems before they occur.

I always say, "Every juvenile delinquent has a delinquent mother." And when I say it, of course it has to be so.

Now, all you mothers, particularly you mothers with teenagers, give two weeks notice immediately and go home where you belong and are wanted and needed. NOW!

COUNT MARCO

which I dined last week, I overheard her talking to her daughter on the phone. She was sharp, unfeeling and selfish. Her end of the conversation went like this:

"Well, I'm tired too. I'm too busy to talk to you now. Ask your father whenever he gets home. You know you're not supposed to bother me here at work," she snapped viciously and slammed the phone in annoyance.

I casually glanced at my watch. It was a bit past 6 in the evening. Naturally you would like to know my reaction. She's a sorry excuse for a mother, that's what she is.

There is her poor daughter at home. At her age, her problems, no matter how small or unimportant they may appear to a parent, are big ones to her. I really don't know what question she asked. Perhaps she wanted to go to a movie with a girl
