

Goose Girl Can Travel

Few girls have been as lucky during the past year as Inglewood's Kathy Thiere. First, the 19-year-old beauty was selected Hollywood Park's 1967 Goose Girl and spent her summer afternoons strolling around the track's colorful infield gardens and riding over an infield lake in an electric swan-boat—and got paid for doing it.

Then last month she was invited to Australia, where the Sydney Turf Club selected her as the representative of American racing to help promote the Golden Slipper Meeting, one of Australia's major racing carnivals featured by the running of the Golden Slipper Stakes for the leading two-year-olds of "down under." Kathy also served on the selection board which chose the 1968 Golden Slipper Princess, a position somewhat similar to Hollywood Park's Goose Girl.

Kathy recently returned from three weeks of all-expense-paid globetrotting and her bright, brown eyes, always alive, were nearly jumping out of her head as she talked about her trip.

"It was absolutely the greatest time I ever had in my life. I never dreamed it could be as wonderful as it was. I was pretty busy most of the time, but I loved doing it because everyone down there was so nice to me. And it's such a beautiful place."

An adventurous lass, Kathy made her first side trip even before getting to Australia. After leaving Los Angeles, Kathy had a six-hour stopover in Vancouver while waiting to change planes.

"I wasn't about to sit in that airport all that time, so I got on a sightseeing bus and took a quick tour of Vancouver. It's a real pretty city, too. Then before I got to Australian my plane made stops in Honolulu and Fiji, so the trip over there was exciting and interesting."

Kathy's first big surprise of the venture came upon arriving in Sydney. She hadn't been given any specific itinerary and thus had dressed casually for her lengthy flight. However, waiting to meet her at the Sydney airport were members of the Australian communications media.

"I was very tired, because I had been too excited on the plane to sleep. But as soon as I got off the plane in Sydney I had to change into my Goose Girl outfit and went immediately to a VIP room for interviews and pictures."

Interviews and pictures were the order of the day for Kathy during the next week, as she enthusiastically fulfilled her role as America's ambassador of thoroughbred racing. Promotion of the Golden Slipper Stakes also included attending several fashion shows at various Sydney department stores.

"Fashion is actually what determines who will be the Golden Slipper Princess," explained Kathy. "On the day of the Golden Slipper Stakes, a committee goes through the crowd at the races and picks out about 40 young women to compete, based on what they are wearing. Then several days later the winner is chosen at a big dinner. All the Australian racing officials are at this dinner and it's really an especially nice affair."

Kathy had a chance to spend some time with the 1968 Golden Slipper Princess, Susan Cole, who will be stopping at Hollywood Park later this summer during a tour of the United States.

One of Kathy's biggest thrills was her prowess as a handicapper. A few minutes before the Golden Slipper Stakes was to be run, Kathy was asked to pick the winner of the race on a radio network that carried all through Australia.

During the week before the race Kathy had posed for pictures with all of the horses in the race and had taken a special liking to Royal Farmer, who was something of a longshot. She picked him and moments later he rolled home first.

Kathy remained "down under" one week after the race and although it wasn't filled with the hustle and bustle of the previous two weeks, she had plenty to do.

"One day I went to Leeholme Stud Farm, which is one of Australia's most beautiful breeding farms owned by Mr. Keith Harris. I also went to Palm Beach and Point Piper, which are resorts on the bay in Sydney, and got to spend a few afternoons on a yacht," she said.

While in Australia Kathy had her own agent in Jane Weiss, secretary to the Sydney Turf Club's publicity director. "She was about my age and really looked after me. She made sure I was where I was supposed to be at the right time and was wearing the proper clothes for the occasion. I don't know what I would have done without her."

Naturally Kathy, who lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Thiere, at 10907 Atkinson Ave., Inglewood, returned with a multitude of memories and souvenirs. However, the one she likes best is a stuffed Koala bear, about two feet high. "Isn't he the cutest thing you ever saw," she says with those eyes beaming. No wonder the Goose Girl job is so sought after.

Parnelli Won't Drive Turbo

Parnelli Jones is looking for a car to drive in the Indianapolis 500 on Memorial Day, but he insists on an auto that can win the race.

Parnelli declared himself out of this year's contest, convinced his new turbine car built by Andy Granatelli cannot win except by a fluke.

That left two former winners, defending titlist A. J. Foyt and Britain's Graham Hill, in the field shooting for the 33 starting berths when qualifications get under way in two weeks.

Popular Parnelli was to have driven the same No. 40 fire engine red turbocar that almost carried him to victory last year.

The difference is that the engine's power has been reduced by one-third to comply with new United States Auto Club specifications—a move Granatelli fought in a federal court suit but lost.

Jones, winner of the 1963 race here, has said all along he did not believe the 1968 version of his turbocar would be competitive with the piston engine machines.

"I race to win and I don't think this car is competitive with the piston cars," he said. "So I don't think I can win with this car except for a fluke. I don't depend on flukes. It's as simple as that."

"The new turbine, which is only two-thirds the size of last year's engine, will be so over-stressed it may not last the race—or even the four laps of qualifying, if we try to get competitive horsepower out of it."

There is speculation Parnelli may enter the race in a conventional racing car.

DODGERS SLATE TORRANCE NIGHT

Choice reserved seat tickets for Torrance's own night at Dodger Stadium on Monday, June 3, were received this week at the Torrance Area Chamber of Commerce, 1510 Cravens Ave.

The tickets, priced at $2.50 each, will reserve a block of seats behind home plate for the Torrance Night affair as the Dodgers meet the Pittsburgh Pirates.

City officials headed by Mayor Albert Isen, and Chamber President Larry Bowman will be spotlighted in pregame festivities at the huge stadium, according to William Melville, chairman of the Chamber's Sports and Recreation Committee.

The possibility of forming bus parties is being discussed, Melville said. Details on that will be reported as they develop, he added.

"The Torrance Night outing should be loads of fun," Melville said. He urged that tickets be obtained early so the sponsors can be sure that a sufficient number are set aside for the crowd. Tickets may be picked up now at the Chamber office in Downtown Torrance.

North needs a win over Santa Monica to clinch second place and a berth in the CIF playoffs and the team needs a second win over South to stay in the race for the title.

South scored two runs in the first inning to beat Hawthorne. Otherwise the league would have been knotted up in a 3-way tie for first place.

The Spartans blanked Redondo, 11-0 and Santa Monica, 3-1, to combine for a 6-game winning streak.

Doubles by Dan Pace and Brent Barron and a single by Jeff Wang accounted for the two runs against Hawthorne.

Dick Foulk gave up a run in the sixth after 19 scoreless innings of pitching.
