

Coffee Break

By Adeline Daley

Although I keep reading articles about people whose attics have turned out to be a "storehouse of hidden treasures," I'd be willing to part with everything in our "attic" for a nominal price. That is, I don't want to pay TOO much to have it hauled away.

I'm getting desperate, because our "attic" is housed in the garage and its "hidden treasures" are taking up so much room that we can't even squeeze the kids' bicycles inside, much less an automobile.

Some people, of course, have "garage sales" in which they get rid of unwanted items, but I can't bribe the Goodwill to take away some of our relics.

"Lady, I have a bad back," the driver will apologize as I point to a perfectly good hot water heater, except that the bottom fell out. Nor is there much of a call for non-workable washing machines or a wall oven whose parts can be found only in Germany—East Germany, that is.

It's a shame that you can't even turn in these old appliances as trade-ins, although I have found that the most I've ever been offered was $5 for our living room couch and chair. I considered it an insult, but now, two years later, I'm willing to settle for $1.50 and that includes the doilies I used to cover the worn spots.

Along with these bulky items which have made our garage look like a window of a second-hand store, we also have boxes of clothing I can't decide to give away or keep.

But our biggest problem is trying to dispose of the carton upon carton of possessions belonging to our kids. As soon as they see their half-torn comic books and old toys ready to be thrown away, you'd think our garage was TV's "Supermarket Sweepstakes" as they compete with each other to see how fast they can retrieve things from the discard pile.

"Don't tell me you were going to give away my favorite doll!" one of the younger ones will exclaim.

I know. That's the one with one leg missing, bald-headed, with the stuffing falling out, which nobody has played with in five years. And I am not to throw away that broken skateboard because of its sentimental value.

Nor is my husband much help as he removes a stack of magazines he "hasn't gotten around to reading." They're old ones with the president on the cover which speculate whether or not he'll run. Only the "president" in this case is Harry S. Truman.

So you see it takes a great moral fortitude to clean out our garage. Incidentally, Dad, what are all those coat hangers, empty coffee cans and peanut butter jars doing in the box?

Assignment TV

By TERRENCE O'FLAHERTY

There's a new noise in Lotustland these days. It is caused by Hollywood actors slamming their make-up kits and hammering together their soap boxes in preparation for the coming political race.

After closely observing the habits of actors for many years, it is difficult to believe that anyone could be influenced by their personal preferences in any area, but there is a new generation going to the polls for the first time in November. It is a generation warmed since the cradle by star power and advisers in both parties are not overlooking that it may influence their votes.

In the McCarthy camp are Paul Newman, Tony Randall, Dustin "The Graduate" Hoffman, Robert Ryan, Elaine May, Hal Holbrook and Viveca Lindfors. Stumping for Bobby Kennedy are Sonny ceremonies. Also JoAnne Johnson, Gayle Cuendet, Kathy Hallian, and Nancy Davis, served as honorary officers, with Gayroi Rettberg, soloist, Nancy Stephenson, honored queen, and members of Bethel 36.

political preferences of TV stars are as much of a liability as they are a blessing. My neighbor, Mrs. Pellachotti, loathes Barbra Streisand to such an extent that she is contemplating a change in registration from Democrat to Republican but she won't go through with it until she learns who the Flying Nun is for. She likes her even less.

When it comes to celebrity endorsements, television viewers of all ages have been suckled on disbelief. There is good reason to expect they may not care to distinguish stellar political plugs from similar endorsements for coffee, frozen orange juice and American Express. But this is not discouraging anyone.

If Dr. Doolittle's dream came true and we could "talk to the animals" you may be sure that both parties would be waiting to hear from Lassie.

Hollywood's Republicans are traditionally less vocal but they appear to be waiting for the GOP's final line-up, although Rudy Vallee and Ginger Rogers are reported by Life Magazine to be already hoofing for Nixon.

YOU WILL notice immediately that television stars are not well represented on the list of Politically Motivated Performers. It is possible that their reluctance comes from the knowledge that their careers are dependent upon sponsors who might be offended by political moonlighting for the opposite party. Exceptions are "Man from U.N.C.L.E." Robert Vaughn (whose show is off the air anyway) and Barbra Streisand who plays it safe by allowing her name to be listed both by Citizens for McCarthy and Citizens for Kennedy.

In days of yore when all movie stars were under contract to studios they were even more silent politically than today's TV performers.

Marlon Brando, the well-known authority on racial disruptions and capital punishment, shot off his mouth about the Oakland Police Department on ABC's Joey Bishop show recently which prompted an immediate demand for equal time by Police Chief Charles R. Gain. He got it the following week.

ABC is quick to note that both shows had the same size audience.

Brando has not yet come out for his favorite candidate. After "Mutiny on the Bounty," his choice is expected to be a major influence on the Tahlman-American vote—although it is not known in what direction.

I HAVE a hunch that the Younger Chairmen Announced

District Attorney Evelle J. Younger announced this week the appointment of prominent community leaders Boris S. Wooley, Dr. Donald E. Wilson, and Robert B. White as co-chairmen of the Torrance Area Younger for District Attorney Committee.

"I am highly honored to have the outstanding support of Mr. Wooley, Dr. Wilson, and Mr. White in our June 4 primary effort to win added voter approval for an expanded countywide war on crime and its causes," Younger stated.

Wooley, a prominent Torrance attorney, has been a member of the Harbor Bar Association for the past 21 years. Dr. Wilson is a city councilman and White is a member of the Torrance Civil Service Commission.

"In only one term in office, Younger has won merited national recognition as a progressive crime fighter," the co-chairmen stated. "He has instituted crime control and prevention programs to upgrade law enforcement, secure passage of crime control legislation, institute space-age techniques and technology for more efficient prosecutions, and open needed channels of communication between law enforcement, local communities, and young people."

The Torrance Area Younger for District Attorney Committee will work closely with the countywide Younger campaign headed by co-chairmen Leonard Firestone, Ernest Loebbecke, and Paul Ziffren, as well as honorary chairman Eugene Biscailuz.

Art Students Will Display College Work

Art students at El Camino College will display their work in the lobby of the college auditorium beginning Monday, May 27, and continuing May 28, 29, and 31, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

A public reception is scheduled during the opening Monday from 7 to 10 p.m.

The art show will culminate the final evening when items on display are offered for sale between 7 and 10 p.m. Exhibits will include drawings, paintings, graphic designs, renderings, prints, photos, and kites.

Doctor to Speak

Seymour Brockman, M.D., will be the guest speaker at the Thursday meeting of the Cleft Parent Guild, Crippled Children's Society. The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at Society headquarters, 1800 N. Argyle Ave., Hollywood.

ARE YOU ONLY HALF SAFE?

State law requires that persons and partnerships transacting business under a fictitious firm name — and most businesses are — must file a certificate stating the full name and place of residence of each person and the membership of any partnerships. Such a certificate must be published once a week for four consecutive weeks.

Persons and partnerships operating a firm using a fictitious firm name who have neglected to publish and file the required certificate are not protected by law and are not entitled to maintain suits for collection or for other purposes in the courts of the State of California.
