

South Side

By Lynne Alessio

At the Fine Arts dessert yesterday afternoon, Debbie Scott was named best actress and Dave Wheeler, best actor.

The dessert replaced the usual banquet which honors all fine arts — drama, journalism, music, and dance. Most promising actor, given to the senior who might succeed as a professional, was awarded to Phil Sarazen. Best supporting actor was Randy Kimose.

Cardi O'Connor was named best dancer, and Casey Johnston most inspirational dancer. Music awards were presented to Bruce Phinney and Sandy Bogin for band, and to Rich Harris and Faith Hatfield for Madrigals. Liz Coker was given a trophy for being editor-in-chief of the 1968 Olympiad.

ANALECTA, South's literary magazine is now on sale for $1. The magazine is published annually by the creative writing class and has contributions from many South students. The art work for the magazine is done by the advanced art classes under the direction of Joseph Hooten. Paula Kenner was editor and Joyce Neu assistant under Mrs. Jean Jones.

THE NEW Olympiad staff for the coming year has been announced. Editor-in-chief is Doris Mondragon; head of academics is Janet Priestly; activities is Chris Bebb; classes is Kathy McClaran; photography is Gary Sheets; and for sports is Robin Cummins.

AWARD WINNERS at the recent Spartan Laurels Banquet are: Spencer Durst, art; Robert Parker, athletic scholarship (given to the varsity
