"I've got good news for you. You're invited to Elvis Presley's first press conference in five years!" said the publicist from NBC. "You're a lucky man."

The summit meeting was held at NBC's Burbank studios in a rehearsal hall where metal chairs had been arranged in rows facing a long table. The first row was already occupied by eight fat girls whose behinds fell in rolls over both sides of the folding chairs. They had been fans of Elvis since the beginning. Newsmen representing the Nation's press filled the other rows.

The first to arrive was Presley's manager "The Colonel" who invented Hada-col before he invented Presley. "Elvis will give you just 15 minutes," he said with a wave of his cigar. It proved to be more than enough.

"Ladies and gentlemen, Elvis Presley!" said the Colonel. The doors opened and he entered with two bodyguards and four roly-poly men of undetermined age wearing T-shirts. They were greeted by a round of nervous applause started by the girl reporters. Then they sat down, Presley in the center. An embarrassed silence followed like those in church after a soloist has stopped singing and you don't know whether to clap or pray.

PRESLEY would be an eye-catcher no matter what his business. He's tall and now that he's lost his baby fat, he no longer resembles Linda Darnell. He wore black suede shoes, tight black pants, an open blue shirt and bandana. His sideburns are longer but he is neither mod nor hippie. His hair is jet black—almost artificially so—and his skin is pale ivory, making him the only personality in the wax museum who looks even more plastic in real life.

His success in 27 hit movies and on 84 million records proves he has more of what the public wants than any performer of our time. Whatever it is, it's not an ability to converse.

Someone asked why we were here. "I'm doing a TV special for NBC," he said... silence... What's it called? "Elvis."... Who's in it? After a conference with his producer he said: "Just me and some dancers."... more silence... Has your audience changed since your last TV appearance five years ago? "Yes. They don't move as fast as they used to."... I hear you're expecting another child. "That's sumthin' on me!"... "He hasn't been home long enough," said one of his buddies. (Big laugh all around.)

"Were you the first one to wear sideburns?" asked a reporter. Presley looked puzzled. The Colonel said: "No, Wyatt Earp." (laughter) "Oh, marvelous!" gushed the lady reporter from Boston... Does the Colonel still handle everything for you? "We have sort of an agreement but everything personal is handled by my daddy."

WHEN DID YOU start smoking? "About a year ago but it's just a prop."... You've always done better in small towns than cities haven't you? "Yes. That's why I'd like my material to be better in the future."

Do you miss doing personal appearances? "Yes. That's one thing I really miss. I never get a chance to go anywhere."

The Colonel stood up and said: "Okay, that's it, ladies and gentlemen! All reporters who would like to have their picture taken with Elvis, come forward."

The front row arose en masse and surged forward. But what surprised me most was that I was nearly trampled by the gentlemen of the press sitting behind me.

Now I know why the NBC man called me lucky. It was a real show. I was lucky I didn't have to pay admission.

Writers' Club to Hear Editor of 'Westways'

Meyer, editor of "Westways" magazine, the official monthly publication of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Manuscripters will meet Friday, July 19, at 8 p.m. in Clark Stadium Community Center on Valley Drive, Hermosa Beach.

Knifepoint Robbery Nets $111

Torrance police are looking for two young men who held up a service station early Sunday morning, forcing the attendant to hand over $111 at knifepoint.

The attendant told police the two men entered the station, located at 3015 W. 182nd St., about 4:30 a.m. While one suspect made talk with the attendant, the other began snooping around the rear of the station.

When the attendant turned to investigate, the first suspect pulled a knife and ordered him to hand over the contents of a money drawer. The suspect then forced the attendant to empty his wallet.
