

Photographic Display Traces the Early History, Culture of City

Several centuries of historical and cultural background of the Los Angeles area can be seen in a collection of giant-sized photographs now on display through Aug. 30 at the Torrance office of Home Savings and Loan Association, 1511 Cravens Ave.

The collection shows many of the 57 historic-cultural monuments protected by the Los Angeles Cultural Heritage Board, whose efforts have disproved the cliché that Californians don't have any "culture" to brag about.

A Californian who is one of the best-known architectural photographers in the nation, Julius Shulman of Los Angeles, was commissioned by the Board to take the pictures represented in the Home Savings exhibit.

Many area monuments are shown in the display.

One of the best known is a striking photo of the General Phineas Banning residence in Wilmington. The 30-room Colonial style home was built in 1864 by Banning, who came to this region in 1851—and quickly became the region's "transportation king."

Other southwest area monuments included in the collection are the Drum Barracks in Wilmington, which is the sole surviving structure of a once extensive federal military headquarters for the West in Civil War days, and a picture of Old St. Peter's Church in San Pedro, which held its first services back in 1884.

The exhibit is open to the public at Home Savings' Torrance office during business hours. Free brochures outlining the history of each of the Cultural Heritage Board's declared monuments and regional maps are being provided by Home Savings throughout the exhibit period in Torrance.

Gun-Toting Youth Robs Mini-Market

A young man with bushy eyebrows and a crew cut held up a small grocery store Sunday evening, escaping with $236 cash.

The attendant at Stop 'n' Go Market, 23044 Crenshaw Blvd., told police the suspect entered the store at 6:50 p.m., pulled a chrome revolver from his waistband, and ordered the cash placed in a paper sack. The suspect appeared calm throughout the holdup, the clerk said.

After the suspect took the cash, he told the attendant to lie down on the floor and then fled.

El Camino Plans Chorale Singing

An opportunity to perform major works with a full orchestra is being offered to persons interested in choral music by singing with the El Camino College Community Choir, according to Crist Mikkelsen, conductor and a member of the music faculty at the college.

The fall semester concert agenda for the group includes the annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" in December and the Romantic period choral work "Te Deum" by Anton Bruckner in January.

"Soloists will be selected from the choir membership whenever possible," Mikkelsen said.

Members of the choir are enrolled in Music 55, a one-unit class meeting Tuesday evenings from 8 to 10 o'clock. First rehearsal session is set for Sept. 17.

Priority registration for fall classes at the college begins Aug. 26 for returning full-time students. Part-time students with priority registration slips begin registering Aug. 28. New and re-entering part-time students register Sept. 3, 4, 5 and 6. Sept. 6 is the last day to register.

Persons attending El Camino College during the fall term must be a legal resident of the El Camino College District, an out-of-state or foreign student must obtain an out-of-district of legal residence.
