

City Urged to Speed Plans for Pueblo Park

Residents of the "Pueblo," a predominantly Mexican-American community on Del Amo Boulevard, have grown impatient waiting for development of a public park in their neighborhood for the past three years.

Airing grievances at Tuesday's City Council meeting, community representative Ruben Ordaz, 2231 Del Amo Blvd., said his neighbors were considering picketing the next council session if no action on the park were taken.

Mayor Albert Isen sympathized with Ordaz, telling him that city attorneys had run into a legal snag with American Standard, owner of the proposed park property.

The city is attempting to negotiate a long-term lease with American Standard on a two-acre parcel of land. However, the company wants 30-day cancellation privileges and the city is reluctant to spend $18,000 to develop the park with the threat of cancellation present.

Councilmen told Ordaz to return in one week for a progress report from city attorneys. "We've been waiting three years," Ordaz said. "One more week won't make any difference."

Ordaz also asked that Del Amo Boulevard between Madrid and Arlington Avenues be closed off daily between 3 and 7 p.m. so that area children might play in the street. The request was referred to the Traffic Division for study.

group of area residents expressed the belief that the problems could be solved merely by enforcing current, minimal laws already on the books.

Attorney George Kurtz, representing 85 per cent of the independent oil operators in the vicinity, urged councilmen to postpone the emergency ordinance until objectionable portions had been ironed out.

Kurtz said oilmen particularly opposed the portion of the ordinance requiring them to place grape stake or masonry walls around some wells. Anything but chain link fence, he said, would impose a financial hardship on oil operators.

Councilmen instructed representatives of oil interests to meet with homeowners and City Attorney Stanley Remelmeier to resolve their difference before a permanent ordinance is devised.
