

Assembly Room at Harbor General Hospital was the scene of a festive party last Friday afternoon when the Volunteers for Children, founded in 1955 by Mrs. Virginia Stoddard Cox, now of Van Nuys, celebrated its 13th anniversary. For thirteen years, these volunteers have provided "tender loving care" for hospitalized children, performing such duties as bathing, changing, feeding, dressing and playing with the youngsters in the pediatric wards. Three times a year, they conduct money-raising projects to buy toys, pediatric equipment and to stage parties for the children. Past presidents on

Yoga Classes Offered at Lomita Center

Lomita Recreation Center, 24428 Eshelman Ave., is accepting registrations for the Yoga class which meets on Friday at 12:30 p.m. and which will be conducted by Renee Taylor.

The lessons will consist of correct rhythmic breathing practiced together with various yoga postures; study of relaxation, concentration, and meditation, which leads to the attainment of physical perfection. Yoga exercises help to tone the muscles and keep the body firm.

There are simple exercises for the beginner, more complicated ones follow.

tion by serving a complete home-cooked spaghetti dinner to Temple members and their children between 5 and 6:30 p.m. Beginning at 7 p.m., Rabbi Jerome Unger will conduct the Succot services, followed by the gathering under the Succot, a booth covered with green branches, palm fronds, vegetables and fruits. The traditional Succot is built each year by the children of the Temple religious school, and the area is decorated by them with the various fruits and vegetables.

Co-chairmen of the event, Mrs. Mark Frisman and Mrs. Ben Kaufman urge all families to attend, and will accept reservations for the family dinner.
