LONDON — In crowded London a friend of mine suggested: "Instead of letting the hotel blokes put you off, join a club. They have rooms at a better value than hotels."

The fastest he could do was one of London's elite gambling clubs. It was the stately home of Lord Curzon. Painted lords and ladies look down haughtily from gilt frames.

You mount to the guest rooms by creaking stairs and an antique brass, bird cage elevator. The room was quaint—I'll give it that. It was about the size of a ship's lifeboat. The roof slanted. The window opened quaintly on chimney pots and pigeons.

When I hung my bag in the chest they call an armoire, it toppled right over on top of me.

Still, I did get a room. The price was right. And they tell me if you can get put up for membership in some of the social clubs, the rooms are quite fine.

"Do London gaming clubs allow visitors to just walk in like Las Vegas?"

No, you must have a temporary guest membership. The hall porter at your hotel will set it up for you. There is a minor fee. And give the porter five shillings for his trouble.

There are a lot of them in Curzon Street and Hertford Street, just behind the Hilton. This is the elegant, swinging part of town. (As you will notice in the small neon signs turned on at night in several apartment house windows.)

A lot of gambling goes on in London. Englishmen pay fearful income taxes, but gaming winnings are NOT taxed. At Curzon House Club you find dowager duchesses at draw poker. Pair o' Shoes in Hertford Street is modest and popular. It seems I heard they have gambling at the Playboy Club which is in this area, too.

"Whether to drive down to Mexico and have our car or fly and rent, that is the question?"

David Dodge ("Poor Man's Guide to Europe," etc.) has an excellent new book, "Fly Down Drive Mexico." That is his advice. And he works it out at a fair saving if you fly down and rent. This book is tops on costs, getting around Mexico and where to go. Even if you know Mexico, buy it. (Mac-Millan, $5.95.)

I must say renting a car in Mexico is a grab bag experience. I've come up with some dreadful clunkers that stalled far out in burro land. Two or three times I've had a car reserved, promised, guaranteed. Delivery was 24 hours late. ("The tourist did not return it," said the rental man. "Tourists are not reliable.")

The trick is NEVER check out of your hotel until the car is delivered! (Last time, I had the car delivered the night before. When I started to go in the morning, the battery had run down.) But once on your way, Mexico is wonderful driving country.

"For two college girls going to Europe next summer (we hope!) would you suggest Eurailpass? Or do you think bikes are possible?"

I'm for Eurailpass first. It's cheap for the great mileage you get on trains. Now you can do both. Rent a bike in Europe and use it whenever you stop. Then put your bike in the baggage car and take it off in the next place you stay. (I'll send anybody my "Bicycling in Europe." It's free. But send an envelope with your name and address and a stamp on it.)

This last summer Europe was packed with student travelers. You'll run into young people all over who will share information with you. (Morning at any sidewalk cafe near American Express is the Coca Cola travel news hour.)

Before dashing into this biking thing, rent one at home and try doing a few miles a day. It's not as easy as you remember it from childhood. "Europe is all uphill," said a friend of mine who biked it.

"Is film more expensive in Europe?"

I don't buy much. But where I did, it was higher than at home.

For President

Ballot to List Four Parties, Three Names

Capitol News Service

SACRAMENTO — Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan has announced four political parties will be listed on the presidential ballot, but only three presidential candidates. There will be four vice presidential candidates listed, however.

The candidates of the Democratic and Republican parties, plus the American Independent Party of George Wallace will be listed. However, under the heading of the Peace and Freedom Party, the vice presidential candidate, Peggy Terry, will be listed. Eldredge Cleaver, named as the PF Party presidential candidate, will not be listed since he is only 33 years old and the U.S. Constitution requires candidates to be 35 years old.

The State Supreme Court stitution requires candidates ruled that Cleaver's name should not appear on the Nov. 5 ballot.

Jordan also announced that six other groups not qualified for the ballot, nevertheless will have their write-in candidates' votes counted.

The six groups are: Berkeley Defense Group, Kent M. Soeters for president and James P. Powers, vice president; Californians for an Alternative in November, Eugene J. McCarthy for president; Committee for the Write-In Vote, Dick Gregory for president and Mark Lane for vice president; Communist Party of Northern California, Charlene Mitchell for president and Michael Zagarell for vice president; Prohibition National Committee, E. Harold Munn Sr. for president and Roland E. Fisher for vice president; and Socialist Labor Party, Henning A. Blomen for president and George S. Taylor for vice president.

Deadline Set for Volunteers

Committee chairmanships for the ninth annual Founders Day Banquet of the Little Company of Mary Hospital have been announced by David K. Hayward, a Redondo Beach councilman and general chairman of the banquet.

Hayward said the dinner-dance is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 19, at the Airport-Marina Hotel.

Holding major posts will be Joseph A. Metzger of Harvey Aluminum, George H. Holmes of TBW Systems Group, Inc., Charles Cox of Western Airlines, and Dick Fitzgerald of the Redondo Beach Chamber of Commerce.

SUMMER SESSION

Torrance Unified School District runs a six-week summer school program in all elementary and high schools which local private school students may attend.
