

COLLEGE REPORT

By ROBERT M. BERSI
Assistant to the President
California State College, Dominguez Hills

Problems of Freedom crowd in upon Americans in 1968 more persuasively than probably ever before in our history. The Revolution and the Civil War focused on specific issues of freedom, but today newspapers and magazines bulge with stories about one or another kind of freedom. Is a physician free to ease a dying patient out of life? What penalty should be given a scientist who has betrayed the freedom of his country to spy for another? Shall certain movies and books be banned?

Today's headlines blazon stories of violent public dissent on critical national issues. College and university campuses find themselves repeatedly disrupted over this or that interpretation of a disrupted freedom. Tomorrow will have other such headlines and crises and perhaps they will be even more serious than now. Clearly, the intelligent American needs to determine where he stands on questions of freedom. Few, if any, of his responsibilities are more urgent than this.

IN PARTICULAR, academic people need to be clear about what they mean by academic freedom. In this sense they have no less a problem than the rest of us in coming to grips with this intangible right. It would be unrealistic for me to discuss academic freedom apart from a consideration of freedom in general.

To begin with, freedom is not an absolute. If he wants to survive, an Eskimo is not free to dress as scantily as a Fiji Islander, nor a Fiji Islander to bundle himself up like an Eskimo. A high school student who has low-grade work is not free to enter a good college, nor an untrained person to become a physician, lawyer, or engineer. No one, as Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes observed, is free to yell "Fire!" falsely in a crowded theater or to commit a thousand other unsocial acts.

In short, freedom is not an absolute. It is always controlled by law, and social freedoms are political rights earned after centuries of struggle. They continue in force so long as man maintains free society.

A NUMBER of considerations must be discussed in appraising the nature of freedom before we can go on to any valid discussion of academic freedom. I have mentioned a few of these in earlier columns, but let me go over them once again briefly for the sake of continuity.

Man's primary need is to survive. He is a freedom-loving creature, but he is also an obeying creature. He obeys to remain alive. He accepts the limitations imposed by natural law because he instinctively knows that if he would continue to live he must. He also discovers the power of the social laws relative to his personal survival, and similarly he learns the importance of the manmade laws that dea person and hence his freedom.

IN THE second place, scholars tell us that man's need for order is more basic than his need for freedom. Only when order has been established does freedom become possible; and when order is in jeopardy, crucial kinds of freedom immediately disappear. This is a true of a free society as of a police state. Wars and other extraordinary emergencies illustrate the fact that the principle that without order no society can survive.

Business Executives Join United Crusade

Two retired business executives are now working full time in the Harbor area on the 1968 United Crusade. Every year, commercial and industrial firms donate the services of executives for three months to this fund-raising effort on behalf of 244 United Way agencies and - American Red Cross chapters.

Roscoe Gould of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and Joseph M. Wilson of Shell Oil Co. have been selected as loaned executives for the Harbor area, which includes Torrance, Gardena, Palms Verdes, Lomita, Wilmington, Rolling Hills, San Pedro, Carson, and Harbor City.

BOTH ARE residents of Long Beach and have experience as United Crusade loaned executives. Gould worked on the 1965 campaign, and both took part in the 1967 effort in the Long Beach area.

An alumnus of USC, Gould was associated with Metropolitan Life almost 30 years when he retired.

He was a director of the Kiwanis Club in Vernon and president of both the local and county Christian Endeavor groups of the Christian Church.

WILSON RETIRED after

37 years with Shell. He received his degrees from the University of Missouri at Rolla.

As United Crusade volunteers, they will contact the chief executives of corporations in the area seeking their support and endorsement. After obtaining the corporate gift, they will help organize employe contribution programs.

One out of every three persons in the Los Angeles area benefits from agencies receiving funds from United Crusade. More than 150,000 persons in the Harbor area utilized at least one United Way service last year.
