State Books Still Open in Bill Bonelli Case

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO - (CNS) -The case of William G. Bonelli California's figurative "man without a country" seems doomed eventually to be forgotten in the cob-webs of time. But the state controllers of fice is not forgetting the case, which is wrapped up in the pe-culiar financial fiascos resultfrom the vagaries of Cali-nia law, and rulings from attorney generals.

The controller maintains a special "Bonelli Fund," which now has grown to $70,240.50, which is the amount Bonelli, former member of the state board of equalization has drawn from the state for re-tirement benefits.

threment benefits. The only catch is that Bonelli hasn't drawn the money, which is impounded by the state con-troller, and has been ever since the ex-state official put in his bid for the funds on Dec. 1, 1958, more than 10 years ago.

And more than 14 years have elapsed since Bonelli's case rocked the state in 1954, when he was defeated for re-election to the board, and subsequently indicted in two counties, Riv-erside and San Diego, for alle erside and San Diego, for alle-ged 1 y accepting under-the-table payments for liquor li-censes, which the board at that time dispensed. The then liquor czar for his district fled to Mexico City, and efforts to return him to California for prosecution under the indictments were un successful, largely on the rounds that Mexico held him to be a political refugee.

UNLAWEUL

PROCESSES

And since that time, he has not returned to the United States to the knowledge of au-thorities. His last known habitat in Mexico as listed with the controller's office, was Hermosillo.

While Bonelli vegetates in Mexico, now about 75 years of age, his political enemies in California have grown in stat-

OUR INTERFERENCE

3

The figures range all the ure. Former State Controller Alan Cranston, who refused to pay his $445 a month pension is now United States Senator Elect, one of the highest offices that can be conferred by the state And former Attorney Gener-al Stanley Mosk, who ruled that Cranston's decision was correct in that the state could withhold funds allegedly due, although it could not withhold payment of pensions to fugi-tives, is now a member of the

HERB CAEN SAYS:

to the state

state supreme court, anothe of the state's highest offices. The strange thing about the case is that it never has been decided by the courts. A suit filed by Bonelli's lawyers to force payment seems to have disappeared in the limbo of forgotten legal annals, and apparently can't be revived un-til Bonelli returns to render an inting of the funds he alle g e d l v received which are claimed to be due and payable way from $130,000 to $320,000. and the state treasury isn't likely to see any of it. What will be the final disposition of the more than $70,-000 withheld from Bonelli remains to be seen, but it is more than likely that a legisla-tive act will be necessary to write the money off the state account books. Meanwhile, the account books. Meanwhile, the state treasurer is investing the money in the pooled money ac-count, and it is drawing inter-est, not for Bonelli, but the state of California.

Comment and Opinion PRESS-HERALD Friday, December 13, 1968

It's Open Season

To many of us, this is the Holiday Season and spirits are soaring as we bustle about with our shopping lists and card lists getting ready to remember those around us at Christmas.

It also is a rather special season for some others for those who look to the season between Thanksgiving and Christmas as an open season for burglars and petty thieves.

Police department statistics traditionally show that December ranks as one of the busiest months every year as the number of home and auto thefts and burglaries reach epidemic proportions.

An areawide campaign, boosted by a pamphlet called "Don't Give a Burglar An Even Break," is being waged throughout the Southland.

Police officers point out that 70 per cent of all burglaries occur during an extended absence by a homeowner. Police suggest leaving a light burning, canceling home deliveries, and keeping lawns trimmed as a help in keeping burglars away.

Securely locked doors is an obvious suggestion, and a thorough check of windows and shutters before leaving home could be well worth the effort.

your absence from home is to be of any length, notify the police department. Patrolling units will be alerted for any unusual activity in the area of your home. Neighbors, too, play an important role here. Tell them you're going, and for how long.

Arrange with neighbors to watch for package deliveries, and for other signs which may be a signal to a prowling burglar.

It's a lot easier to prevent a crime than it is to solve one.

Other Opinions

ELSINORE, CALIF., SUN: "For a touch of the ridiculous, we might throw in the fable of the goose ROYCE BRIER that laid the golden egg. The greedy man who came into ownership of this fabulous bird could not wait for it to lay one golden egg each day. He killed the goose, according to the fable so that he might get all of the golden eggs once. Is that what our taxing bodies want to have happen . . . destroy the source?

BEEVILLE, TEXAS, BEE-PICAYUNE: "It seems that just about every generation in every society has its rebels. The current species is called the hippy. The breed varies but little from nation to nation. The teddy boys of England and the lipstick-wearing longhairs of the Scandanavian countries are the same, fundamentally, as the domestic oddballs of San Francisco, New York and Boston fame."

WILLIAM HOGAN

He Looks at Death After Eleven Years on the Row

of Death Ho New Jersey State Prison at Tren-ton, a man named Edgar H. Smith Jr. declares, with a cer-tain amount of authority: "I do not intend to argue here a defense of my own case . . . but rather to take a personal look rath at the system of capital punish ment -- how it works, how efwhat life is like under the shadow of a death sentence. Quite apart from the obvious personal reason, I believe it is a terrible system and should In a remarkable personal document, "Brief Against Death," Edgar Smith takes a long hard look at the State engaging in the death business; at the State, and the law, playing a game of cat-and-mouse with contrib a man convicted of (but not necessarily guilty of) the brut-al bludgeon murder of a Mah-way, N.J., teen-age girl in March, 1957. Smith describes his arrest, interrogation, trial, imprisonment, years of solitary confinement (nine of these spent in a small winds cell), and an incredible s and 13 stays of execution he has been through. There doubt about thing, he has "grown up"; for Smith's guilt. another, he has become an articulate, disciplined writer. No

Smith's case reminds one of Caryl Chessman's 12-year ef-fort to escape the gas chamber at San Quentin and his writings from Death Row before he was matter what happened that March night in 1957, Smith is a very different man today. Yet he still may go the way of Car-Browsing Through the yl Chessma You can sense sweat and anguish in this book, but also World of Books some clear thinking on the sub legally murdered in 1960. Once again, this system of in-carceration, this on-and-off threat of execution, conject of crime and punishment. One must agree with William F. Buckley Jr., columnist and man. editor, who wrote a foreward to this book, that Smith is a finement, legal dilly-dallying with a human life becomes a to this book, that smith is a remarkable young man. Buck-ley, who became interested in Smith's case some year ago and hired a new legal aid for him is "convinced of his in. particularly repellent appa-ratus of justice and social ob-Smith admits he did much to him, is "convinced of his in-nocence." A reader will be te to his own con viction by lying to police origi-nally, "partially out of fear, partially out of misplaced loy-alty toward friends." He was too, when he finishes this be Incidentally, Smith was not prevented from writing while on Death Row. The warden of the New Jersey prison was aware of his work and was 23 at the time, an ex-Marine sergeant, married, the father of a small daughter, "a thor-oughly indolent, immature, quoted recently in The New York Times: "We have no rules against inmates writing books." Smith is just lucky half-educated drifter." writing and inine of these small windowless Smith used his year of con-incredible 14 ap-stays of execution correspondence courses, studif 11 years in a death house can ied law, read widely. For one was General Eisenhower's Su-preme Headquarters in the Four Power control in Berlin. French, and Russian dele gates. The man was Robert Mur-phy, who looked like a hard-ware dealer on tour. His pants He spoke with a soft voice, ware dealer on tour. His pants were baggy from flying about, and his listeners were some thirty newsmen visiting the rubble of postwar Germany.

Opinions on Affairs of the World His listeners listened carefully. He said something like, "1 think they understand us," the

"they" being the Russians. He had other comments but they are forgotten after 22 years. * * *

Mr. Murphy was already fa-mous, for he had lined up the French Admiral Darlan in a deal not to resist a North Afri-can landing. The deal was sav-agely criticized, but it had sav-ed the lives of some thousands of American soldiers, who would otherwise have had to d otherwise have

The time was 1946. The place and he had just come from a lomat, the one who is followed session with the British, by warfare.

Mr. Murphy is no dove on coexistence. He believes in concession, as all true diplomats must, but he believes in concession by the strong, not concession by the weak. He is not

Messrs. Johnson and Rusk, or anybody else, in the advice he gives the President-elect. Nor will he drone along on a fixed line, only to re-state the line a month later with a slight change of wording. If his posi-tion is unchanged he will tell

He would make an excellent

Anyway, Murphy will know

City Crew Has Fastest Ticket System in West

Good morning, Luv: And here we are watching a city crew hard at work. First a guy with a jackhammer rips out with a jackhammer rips out our parking meters — rat-tat-tat. Then another paints the curb to indicate a new bus zone. After which a Meter Maid comes along and slaps parking tags on the car which, just a few minutes earlier, had just a few minutes earlier, had been legally parked ... Pretty good restaurant scene at Ru-bin's in Fairfax reports Gor-don Jones. This wife kept pes-tering her husband for a new "fall" (you know, the hairy kind) to the point where he s u d d e n l y exploded "Okay, okay, you want a new fall" — and yanked the chair out from under her. under her.

Meanwhile, back at the flack: Redwood City now has a flack: Redwood City now has a topless pool hall, putting that town two up in the-mammary sweepstakes. Is San Francisco sagging on all fronts? ... Graffito spotted on a Stanford wall by Leonard Schwartz: "Revolution now, pay later!" And I did like that one in the local weekly the other day. ocal weekly the other day: 'Why did modern music have to come along in our time?"

while "Bullitt" was being film (a Mustang, naturally), races ed here, and why not? A glamorous star. Steve McQueen. was playing a local police officer - a Lieutenant, at that and the movie had to make Our Force look good, didn't it? ... Yes, didn't it: The epic beings with Lt. McQueen developing an unexplained hatred for a U.S. Senator about to stage an anti-crime hearing here. Ostensibly, the Lt. and the Senator are on the same side, but you'd never know it. The Senator puts the Lt. in charge of his star witness for a couple of days, a friendly ges-ture, and the Lt. lets the wit-"Embarcadero Row." If we have an "Embarcadero Row, After I never heard of it. I never neard of it. . . After the witness dies, the Lt. has the body spirited to the morgue the body spirited to the morgue as a John Doe, which is prob-ably a violation. Then he talks a friendly doctor at S.F. Gen-eral — a black, naturally — into "misplacing" the records, another bummer. . . . In the famous chase scene, the Lt., in civvies and driving his own car around town at what looks to be 110 miles an hour, going through stop signs and red lights and scattering pedestrians while chasing another car going 111 miles an hour. This race goes on all over town. from Russian Hill to Twin Peaks, and not one police car gives chase! Where were all our Blue Meanies, having cof-fee at Enrico's? ... Furthermore, not that it matters any longer, the Lt. wears his hair too long and is shacked up with a chick in a pad on Nob Hill. The S.F. Police Dept.'s a cap-pella choir may now join us in yet another chorus of "Hooray for Hollywood!" Followed by the question : "Dis is a trib-uie???"

A Report From Our Man in San Francisco

A look at the book: Dr. Him A look at the book: Dr. Him Wong lives on Fifth Ave., but him right most of the time. Him Tak Wong, who lives on Broadway, don't talk to no wonger than anybody else. Him Way Wong, who lives on 12th Ave inn't way wong most 12th Ave., isn't way wong most of the time.... The case will now join in a chorus of "I'm the Eighth Little Dwarf from Fisherman's Wharf and Crabby Is My Name").

Thompson Restates Plea

For Police Recognition

Editor, Press-Herald:

response to my suggestions to training, working conditions, salary, pension, etc. afforded our police officers; but if any-

What I'm suggesting is that we are in immediate need of a new concept in police work if we are to retard the growth of the patrolman. The respect of the senior officers and administrators has nothing whatsoever to do with the problem as these men earned their respect in the field under fire. Because of this respect they usually move up into the administrative ranks and are pulled away from the public. The system are are now following leaves us in this situation. No police officer below the rank of sergeant has any way to show the public his achieve-ments or capabilities, and is, therefore, automatically placed in such a position that favorable public opinion is withheld more and more, day withheld more and more, day by day. What I'm trying to convey is the need of some type of con-tinuing educational program available to all police officers of such high quality the public would know and appreciate their efforts, thereby allowing the patrolman to regain the re-spect necessary for him to be his most effective.

I hope that my efforts to res-tate the problem would meet with the Mayor's approval and that I would witness Mr. Isen apply the same leadership, drive, and imagination he has so successfully displayed in bringing so many previous honors to our city by initiating some program of this type to regain the respect for law and order within our city

To Ease Transition Work

I recently read Mayor Isen's going to be fooled by the Russians, the South Vietnamese,

Nixon why, meanwhile starting wheels to try to change it.

Secretary of State, except he is 74, and may not feel he can undertake so exacting a task.

* * *

establish a criminal law course for our city police officers, and I want to be very explicit that the last thing I want to do is alienate Mr. Isen and have him close his mind to this problem, but I must comment on his statements. To try to restate the problem in a more acceptable way, I accept all of the Mayor's statements regarding the city's one can show me that any of these efforts and money has reduced our crime rate, I would say no more, but this alarming fact remains. We are losing our battle against crime.

crime within our city. I further suggest that the root of the problem lies in the respect or disrespect shown fight the French for a bridge-head. Shortly after, Darlan head. Shortly after, Darlan was assassinated by a French-

Murphy, a retired diplor at-large, is representing Presi-dent-elect Nixon at the White House during the interregnum. President Johnson called him an "observer."

Nixon's choice was a happy one, for Murphy is at home with every stripe of European, including the Soviet stripe

He is a tough diplomat, not granite-tough but resilient-tough. He understands the tough. He understands the problems of his opposites, their motives in reacting as they do. They know he understands, which is ultimately helpful. This failure to understand the problems of the antagonist is a foremost trait of the failed dip what's going on, vis-a-vis the Russians, President de Gaulle, president Thieu and in the M i de a st, to identify four enigmas facing any man tak-ing office ten weeks hence. This should be avreadingly office te s should be exceedingly valuable to the President-elect because President-elects under our system live in a curio limbo — they must be respect limbo - they must be respected but not necessarily indulged.

Murphy is not swayed by the foreground appearance of the Kremlin people. If they are abruptly conciliatory at this or that point, he does not believe it means a change of policy He believes Societ policy is a cautious but never-ending an-tagonism toward the West. One is loath to hail this skepticism (which is ingrained with Murphy), but the Czech affair was quite enlightening.

As far as I have been able to learn, the Fidel Castro International Airline has the best safety record of any major carrier in the world. Not one of the hijacked planes has made anything but a perfect landing in Havana.

Morning Report

The trained cockpit crews have remained calm and efficient - even in the presence of unauthorized and lethal instruments. But passengers have tended to complain and show some tenseness. This drawback to the Castro service was reduced on the most recent flight when the hijacker gave the stewardess $20 and bought drinks for everybody. I support this will increase traffic in the future.

Of course Fidel could close down the line any time he wanted to. Just return the hijackers for trial.

Abe Melinkoff

Crusade Thanks

*

Editor, Press-Herald

Thank you for being so coop erative in publicizing the United Crusade this year. Both the staff and volunteers appre-ciate all you have given. We ciate all you have given. We are sure it influenced people in the community to support our

BEVERLY BUTMAN

Glenn Pfeil

Reid L. Bundy

Published Each Wednesday and Friday 3238 W. Sepulveda Blvd

3288 W. Sepulveda Blvd. Torrance, Calif. 90510