'Sit Down, Shut Up!' Fomented Revolution

Lewis D. Gilbert, "America's Number One Stockholder," was featured guest speaker at the meeting of the Southwest Los Angeles Chapter of the National Association of Accountants. "Sit down and shut up!" Had this terse paraphrase not been hurled in the teeth of Lewis D. Gilbert during an annual meeting a quarter of a century ago, chances are he might not have pursued a career as an advocate of stockholders' rights. Today this firebrand crusader, along with his brother John, owns shares in more than 1,200 corporations. This investment gives him the prerogative of not only asking questions of management, but the right to demand an answer. In most cases he gets it.

Gilbert will continue his crusade for "corporate democracy." His viewpoint of "progress" is different than that espoused by our September speakers. As a stockholder in 800 corporations, he attends about 200 annual meetings a year to fight for the cause of a shareholder's bill of rights which includes:

- 1) Centrally located, conveniently timed annual meetings.
- 2) More informative annual reports.
- 3) Greater responsiveness by directors.
- 4) Pre-emptive rights for owners.
- 5) Limitations on executive compensation and executive pensions.
