Population of State Reaches 19.7 Million

SACRAMENTO — Director of Finance Caspar W. Weinberger, this week said new California population figures place the number of Californian's at 19,782,000 as of July 1, 1968.

The total represents an increase of 304,000 from the revised estimate of 19,478,000 for July 1, 1967. The previous gain showed a net increase of 346,000 people.

Weinberger said this is the fifth successvie year that the "rate" of the population growth has diminished.

HOWEVER, Weinberger said, the state has gained nearly 4 million residents since 1960, and predictions for 1969 and 1970 indicate an increasing rate of growth.

The 1968 increase included an estimated 141,000 net migrants and 176,000 more births than deaths, both being lower net increases than any year in recent history.

Weinberger said however, that department estimates indicate that 1969 and 1970 should have gradual increases in net migrations, to 160,000 and 180,000 respectively. Birth rates are also expected to rise to approximately 182,000 and 187,000 respectively for the two years.

* * *

THE NET population increase for 1969 is expected to be about 333,000 for a total of 20,115,000, followed by another hike of 362,000 in 1970, bringing the total to 20,477,000 as compared with the 1960 population count of 15,863,000.

The total population increase, by percentage figures since 1960, started with 3.8 per cent increase in that year, but decreased stadily down to 1.6 per cent in 1968.
