

COLLEGE REPORT

By ROBERT M. BERSI
Assistant to the President
California State College, Dominguez Hills

Current social issues have always played a major part in the interests of American college students. This concern with the popular issues of the day has been, more often than not, an active concern.

College campuses, before and during the American Revolution, were centers of many anti-British activities. The degree of involvement was so great that college students of that day were caught up in the controversies which swirled about and forecast the coming war. Little time was left for classes. Shortly after the first shots were fired at Concord Bridge, campuses were forced to either shut down entirely or drastically limit their operations because the students had joined the Militia and the Continental Army.

It would be a mistake to think that this involvement was a completely sober and solemn business. Like college students throughout the ages, these Colonial youths managed to get a great deal of fun out of their social activism.

FOR EXAMPLE, Harvard students literally chased out of town the professor who pointed the way to Lexington for British troops. It was at Lexington that the British encountered the Minute Men and created the "shot heard 'round the world."

Myles Cooper, Tory president of Kings College, was forced to take sanctuary on a British warship to escape the fury of a mob inflamed by the rousing speeches and fiery pamphlets of a sophomore student named Alexander Hamilton.

Half a century later, with the slavery issue at hand, college students on both sides of the Mason-Dixon Line were active advocates of their different points of view. In the slave-holding territories, students molested anyone who expressed abolitionist sentiments. For example, when a University of North Carolina professor spoke out in 1856 supporting the Republican party, students burned him in effigy and threatened to tar and feather him.

THE SAME year, students at the University of Virginia cheered wildly at the campus presentation to Preston Brooks of a souvenir cane exactly like the one he had used on the floor of Congress to beat anti-slavery statesman, Charles Sumner, into invalidism.

Confusion and indecision marked student action on the slavery issue in the North. A passionate indictment of slavery, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was published in 1852 by a Bowdoin University faculty wife, Harriet Beecher Stowe. The same campus, only a few years later, honored Jefferson Davis with a laudatory degree.

My own undergraduate campus was the scene of student contradiction and confusion over the slavery issue. A campus fraternity, its membership deeply split over the slavery issue, rioted during the 1858 commencement exercise. The riot ended with the jailing of eight students and the hospitalizing of five more. The two factions of the fraternity never compromised their differences. Young men from both groups fought for their beliefs, some in gray and some in blue. To this day, they remain separate fraternal entities.

IN THE turbulence of today's student unrest and activism, one can often feel that the violent expression by students is something new in American college history. This is not so. Active unrest over vital social issues has always characterized the American college student.

Full of the unharmed vitality of youth and stimulated by the importance of current issues, college students often rebel against authority — sometimes to the extent of violence. But one thing must be said about this typical American college student: he has always cared enough about the future of his country to be involved in the vital issues of the day.

Two-way Lanes Useful, CHP Captain Explains

"Two-way left turn lanes can be a valuable aid in preventing traffic tie-ups, but they must be correctly used," Capt. W. R. Waldron of the California Highway Patrol warned today.

Thrifty Drivers Honored

Thrifty Drug and Discount Stores has honored its staff of truck drivers at the 11th annual Safe Driver Awards Breakfast.

At the top of the heap of the more than 60 drivers who received safety awards were three members of the fleet who have 15 years or more with perfect safety records. The three were Jim Cooper of Whittier (20 years), Don Dumas of Los Angeles (16 years), and Alex Martinez of Cudahy (15 years).

It was also announced at the breakfast that the National Safety Council had awarded Thrifty's truck fleet five safety awards for the greater Los Angeles Division.

THRIFTY'S drivers logged a total of 1.5 million miles last year in vehicles ranging from panel trucks to huge double trailer rigs and on road conditions from busy city streets to the highways of the West.

Bernard Stillman, traffic manager for the huge drug chain, handed out the individual awards and announced that Thrifty's drivers have accumulated 532 combined years of accident-free driving.

IN PRESENTING the awards, Stillman noted, "We are justifiably proud of the remarkable safety record established by our drivers during the past year. The record number of accident-free miles is the most ever achieved by our firm and was attained because our drivers practice basic concepts of safety, including "defensive driving."

Guests at the annual affair included Teamster officials, Thrifty executives, representatives of the Hertz Corp., and special guest Highway Patrol Officer Ronald Quintana, who addressed the group.
