

Major Street Job Readied

A contract for improvement of 223rd Street between Normandie Avenue and Vermont has been awarded to McAmis Engineering of Gardena, it was announced today from the offices of Supervisor Kenneth Hahn and Burton W. Chace.

The McAmis bid of $166,413 was the low offer in a series of bids which ranged up to more than $198,000, the supervisors reported.

Work on the more than one-half mile project will include reconstruction and widening of existing roadway and will provide a four-lane highway with parking lanes, curb and gutters. A catch basin system also will be provided for roadway drainage, and sidewalks will be constructed for pedestrian use.

Traffic signals and intersection lighting are included in the project at 223rd and Meyer Street. Signals at 223rd and Vermont will be modified to extend them over the traffic lanes for improved visibility.

The signal system on the project will be interconnected to provide a smooth flow of traffic, Chace's office pointed out.

Some street closing and one-lane traffic in the area may be necessary during portions of the construction work, Hahn said.

OTHER ACTION Monday night included the negotiation of architectural fees with Roy Donley, who will direct remodeling and new structures at the 231st Street and Arlington Avenue schoolsite.

Originally requesting 10 per cent of total building costs, Donley accepted a 6.5 per cent fee for new structures and 8.8 per cent for remodeling work.

Donley supported his original request with a confirmation from the Los Angeles City Schools' building department stating that were he doing a similar job for them, they would pay him the 10 per cent.

SENIOR BOARD member Bert M. Lynn told the architect he didn't buy the idea of people outside the district "telling me how much of my tax dollar I should spend on architectural fees."

"When you do a job for them," Lynn chided Donley, "you tell them Bert Lynn recommends they pay you 12 per cent."
