... Nollac

fense, attorney Walter Young reiterated his contention that Nollac in no way performed any favors for Battum or his land interests. Young noted that in some 30 cases, grading permits were issued before bonds were filed with the engineering department.

However, Young stressed that all other requirements for the grading permits, such as plan approval, had been met in every case, and that bonds were "on the way" from bonding companies.

In regard to the compaction charges, Young said his client
