Tartar Teen Talk

John Goddard, famed anthropologist who has travelled more than a million land, air, and sea miles, presented his film, "Exploring Africa Wonderland," at THS last Wednesday.

The film dealt with his experiences in Kenya with features on Africa's wildlife.

"You don't need to turn on with drugs, you can do it with contact of nature," commented Goddard.

Included in the film were his experiences of conquering Mt. Kenya and Mt. Kilimanjaro. There have been a reported 31 deaths on Mt. Kenya, which now stands 17,000 feet. Originally the mountain was approximately 20,000 feet but time and erosion wore it down.

STUDENTS witnessed a battle between two male giraffes who were fighting for a female. The two animals battered each other with their heads and after becoming weary of the fight they walked away friends. Goddard explained that giraffes have the highest blood pressure of any animal in the world and their heart weighs approximately 25 pounds.

The clever hunting techniques of the lions were also displayed in the film. While the female lion prepared to attack an antelope, the male lion climbed a hill to send his scent upwind. When the antelope herd smelled his scent, they immediately ran away from it and toward the waiting lioness.

SWIFTLY and efficiently the lioness made her kill and was soon eating an antelope dinner with two other lions. After the lions had finished the 350 pound antelope, they can then go without food from seven to 10 days.

Goddard said that the lion once roamed throughout Africa, because of man and his gun, they now live in only a few areas.

"Hunting is justified in certain circumstances, but I have never considered it the height of manhood," Goddard said.

He then told of how the polar bear, the grizzly, and the alligator are threatened by extinction.

IF IT'S QUALITY YOU'RE LOOKING FOR

The blood you give today could save your great-great grandson's life.

Science fiction? Not at all. For authorities believe that blood—or its red cells—can now be stored for a century or more and remain as good as the day when taken from a donor.

This revolutionary prospect comes from advances in the new science of extreme cold, called cryogenics.

Until recently, blood's red cells could be kept only 21 days under ordinary refrigeration. But when frozen instantly and refrigerated with the unearthly cold of liquid nitrogen (—320 degrees F.), red cells retain their life-saving properties indefinitely.

This breakthrough makes possible the storage of vast supplies of blood so that even the rarest and most desperately needed types need never again be in short supply.

Union Carbide helped perfect the equipment and procedures for blood preservation by cryogenics. We've also developed many other uses for this new science. But none is more rewarding than keeping blood in readiness for today's needs. Or perhaps those of a century from now.
