

Kanine Korner

By Francis X. Lohmann

According to archeological evidence, stone age man domesticated the dog.

Dog skulls buried beside human remains offer ample proof that the dog was chosen to be man's best friend long before recorded history. And that's for dog-gone sure! Ancient inscriptions and pictures 5,000 to 6,000 years old describe dogs that look strangely familiar. Hunting Hounds, Mastiff — like dogs guarding homes and flocks, and tiny house pet dogs, too.

Through selective breeding more than 150 distinct breeds exist today. There are 115 breeds of dog recognized by the American Kennel Club and many more breeds, not AKC registerable but none the less purebred.

CANINE deeds of heroism highlight the pages of history, past and present, and you can be sure in the future, too. Dogs have gone to war since the time of Alexander the Great. Dogs wore miniature suits of armor in the middle ages. Since the first World War, dogs have been trained for sentry duty and to carry messages under fire.

An innovation in the Second World War were the paratroopers, an elite corps trained to parachute food, supplies and equipment to our fighting men. Now, of course, we have astronaut dogs.

IN THE 13th Century, Llewelyn, Prince of North Wales, had a palace at Beddgelert. One day he went hunting without Celert, his faithful and beloved dog who was unaccountably absent.

Upon Llewelyn's return, the truant stained and smeared with blood, joyfully sprang to meet his master. The Prince, alarmed, hastened to find his son and saw the infant's cot empty, the bedclothes and floor covered with blood.

The frantic father plunged his sword into the dog's side thinking he had killed his heir. The dog's dying yell was answered by a child's cry. Llewelyn searched and discovered his boy unharmed. But nearby lay the body of a mighty wolf which Celert had slain. The Prince filled with remorse is said never to have smiled again. How tragic!

BARKS AND YAPS — Infectious hepatitis, a liver disease, has varying symptoms. These include vomiting, excessive thirst, diarrhea and a fever that comes and goes . . . There is definitely no truth to the old belief, that as long as a dog has a cool, moist nose he is in good health. Many times this is the case but don't depend on this theory. A mighty sick little dog can have a cold nose.

Seldom does this reporter go "all out" in behalf of a commercial product but this one is so tremendous it deserves special exposure to the pet loving populace. A true public service, indeed! I'm referring to Nilodor, a New York City based, nationally distributed product guaranteed to eliminate the strongest pet animal odors instantly.

Unlike the masking deodorizers so dog-gone prevalent on the market today, Nilodor has only a faint scent while nullifying unpleasant aromas arising from any source. Such a god-send to pet shops, kennels, animal hospitals, breeders, grooming parlors and to the individual pet owner. One drop does it for 24 hours. Amazing but true and available at most pet shops.

BREED OF THE WEEK — MALTESE . . . Most folks who dig deep into the annals of dogdom agree that the Maltese is one of the oldest breeds of dog on record and I might add there is ample evidence that these darling little denizens of the dog world were cherished pets of the women folk of ancient Greece and Rome many centuries before Christ.

For all time the breed has been purposely kept small. They have been described in centuries long since forgotten as being not much larger than ferrets or squirrels.

Sometimes the breed is referred to as the Maltese Terriers. This name is definitely incorrect for although they are classified in the Toy Group, the Malteses are spaniels and not terriers.

THE MALTESE is one of the hardest of the toy breeds and adapts himself easily to almost any type of climate or environment.

Interest in the Maltese is growing by leaps and bounds. The Maltese tips the scales at about 4 pounds and in height 5 inches.

Dorothy Tinker of Las Vegas has done much to promote and spotlight these quaint little beauties before the eyes of West Coast dog lovers.
