

ANN LANDERS

Ann Gets 10 Whacks

Dear Ann Landers: As a pediatrician I must take issue with your advice to the 11-year-old boy whose mother made him eat for lunch what he refused to eat for breakfast. You said it was a wonderful idea and you hoped other mothers would do the same.

Obesity is a major health problem today and your suggestion doesn't help any. Eating habits are acquired early and are difficult to change. Unfortunately, too many mothers feel it is a virtue to clean a plate and a sin to leave anything. A great many people are in the habit of eating too much because their mothers made them feel guilty about leaving food.

The wise mother offers her children the right kinds of food and does not make an issue of how much or little he eats. A child will eat as much as he needs. If a youngster repeatedly leaves food, the servings should be reduced.

Your advice is usually excellent, Ann, but you let us down this time. — Anchorage, M.D.

Dear M.D.: You are right. I goofed when I applauded the mother for serving oatmeal for lunch when the kid threw the breakfast oatmeal down the clothes chute. (I didn't think he should get away with it.) Even so, the advice was poor because children shouldn't be made to eat food they dislike particularly as punishment. Shame on me! I'll take ten whacks with Dr. B. Spock's book.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter and her fiancé are planning a church wedding in June. The young man is a splendid person. They went together for two and a half years and are very much in love.

Problem: The father of the groom happens to be a clergyman. His son did not follow his faith but joined ours. Now the father refuses to attend the wedding because he believes it would be showing approval of his son's chosen church and he does not wish to do this.

The father has asked that there be no big wedding, that the couple slip off to another state and be married quietly. The young couple is deeply hurt by his attitude. Please express an opinion. — RSVP Negative

Dear Neg: The groom's father is out of tune with the times. Where's his ecumenical spirit? These days when Methodists in Evanston invite their Jewish friends to church for a Passover-Easter supper, and nuns in Grand Rapids chant Hebrew music for a Bar Mitzvah and the Knights of Columbus and the Masons have a joint meeting in South Bend, the groom's father is clearly out in left field.

Dear Ann Landers: Have you flipped your lid? Recently a 14-year-old girl asked if it is possible to get pregnant if a girl keeps all her clothes on. You said Yes. You CAN'T mean it. Please explain.—Zonked Zellec

Dear Z: The girl's clothes need not come OFF. They can be unzipped, unhooked, unsnapped, loosened, and rearranged. Get it?

How will you know when the real thing comes along? Ask Ann Landers. Send for her booklet "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of the Press-Herald enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

New Law Introduced To Curb Loan Sharks

Capitol News Service
SACRAMENTO — The State Department of Justice, through the office of Attorney General Thomas Lynch, will seek a law to control exorbitant late payment charges by mortgage loan brokers.

Chief Deputy Attorney General Charles A. O'Brien has announced that Assemblywoman Yvonne Brathwaite (D-Los Angeles) will introduce the proposed legislation.

O'Brien said, "Our office has uncovered flagrant abuse of late payment penalties by certain mortgage loan brokers. We are hoping for support from the many mortgage loan brokers who do not indulge in these practices, which amount to legal loan sharking."

THE PROPOSED law would limit late penalties to $3.50 or 10 per cent of the late installment and would not allow late charges to be applied more than once for the same late payment.

Mrs. Brathwaite declares, "Some mortgage loan broker borrowers pay off a loan and end up owing more than they did originally because of late payment charges. We are talking about late charges of $25 to $45 per month."

SHE CITED one borrower who paid $1,565 on a $4,025 loan and after 37 payments ended up owing $4,879, or $854 more than the original loan. This resulted from 27 late charges of $40.25 each. In fact, Mrs. Brathwaite said, the borrower had originally received only $3,280 because of the broker's commission and charges.

According to the bill proponents, some mortgage loan brokers do not notify borrowers of the late payment penalties. The borrower is never aware of a pyramiding late payment situation until the loan is due and he is informed that he owes more than he borrowed, because the bulk of his payments have to go to pay the late penalties.

Red Cross Bloodmobile Sets Visit

With 18 pints of blood being administered every hour in Los Angeles area hospitals, the Red Cross slogan, "Help Us Help" has real meaning for the Red Cross blood program.

Torrance area residents will have a chance to help by donating blood Monday, May 5, from 2 to 6:30 p.m. when a Red Cross bloodmobile will visit the Torrance YMCA, 2906 W. Sepulveda Blvd., Torrance.

The bloodmobile is sponsored by the Torrance Council PTA, according to Mrs. Gordon Jones, Torrance-Lomita Red Cross Branch chairman of blood donor recruitment.

Appointments to donate blood can be made by calling the Red Cross.

Book Sale, Program To Benefit Library

Friends of the Torrance Library will sponsor a benefit used book sale and program, beginning Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Torrance Recreation Center, 3341 W. Torrance Blvd. Proceeds will go toward the construction of the new Torrance Library, scheduled for opening in 1970.

Guest speakers at the Thursday program will be Mildred and Gordon Gordon, husband-wife writing team, who have cranked out two novels and several screen plays about cats.

THEIR FILMS include "Undercover Cat," "That Darn Cat," and "Undercover Cat Prowls Again." Their two novels have sold more than two million copies in 17 countries and earned the Gordons better than $300,000.

The Gordons credit their success to a $2 investment: the purchase of very personable black cat at the Los Angeles city pound. Named "D.C.," the coalblack kitty is an important family member at the Gordons' Encino home.

BUT THE Gordons have a problem now. They have written a new novel, "Night Before the Wedding," a romantic suspense story set in Los Angeles. The problem is that the book has absolutely nothing to do with cats. The question is this: Can any writer who has become solidly identified with a character write about anything else?

"Unfortunately a writer becomes catalogued the same as an actor," says Mildred Gordon. "To most people Sean Connery will always be James Bond. We only hope that 'Night Before the Wedding' will be so engrossing that most people will forgive the absence of D.C."

Profile: Ted Donovan

Ex-Lumberjack Heads Up Personnel Department

TED DONOVAN

The swarthy, swashbuckling life of a lumberjack in the Pacific Northwest proved to be a very educational experience for Theodore E. Donovan. So educational, in fact, that it led to a degree in labor relations.

But Donovan's logging career bears a rather indirect relationship to his book learning. Of his lumberjack days, Donovan says, "That's when I got the idea there must be some better way to earn a living."

And he was right. Donovan's scholarly endeavors eventually led him to a top position with the city of Torrance; that of personnel director. The post makes it Ted Donovan's responsibility to administer the city's personnel program, setting up examinations, making recommendations to the city manager, classifying employees, and administering the safety and training programs.

Logging may have a storybook glamour, but Ted Donovan has found personnel work much more fulfilling his talents since he began work with the city in December, 1959.

As a boy newly graduated from high school in his hometown of Everett, Wash., Donovan made a concerted effort to save as much of his logging earnings as possible for his future education. These savings, plus a boost from the G.I. Bill, made it possible for Donovan to complete his education at the University of Washington in 1947.

During World War II, Donovan served in the South Pacific with the U.S. Navy for 3½ years, primarily in the Philippines, but he vigorously denies he was any sort of "hero." He had achieved the rank of chief petty officer at the time of his honorable discharge, and is currently active in Veterans of Foreign Wars.

With college and military service behind him, Donovan got his first taste of life in the business world in 1948, taking a position with the National Labor Relations Board in Seattle. During the time he worked intermittently with the board as an election examiner, Donovan also found time to work as a classification interviewer with the Washington State Employment Service.

Donovan's first job as a personnel examiner came in 1951, when he joined the Seattle city civil service department. The experience proved valuable when he moved to Los Angeles in 1955, teaming up with the training section of the Department of Water and Power. As a DWP training technician, it was Donovan's function to survey and make recommendations of department training programs, problems, materials, and needs. In no time, Donovan's position was boosted to that of DWP job analyst, with responsibilities for collecting and analyzing occupational data.

Intelligence and perseverance through the years made Donovan the top contender for the job of personnel director with the City of Torrance. In his nine years with the city, Donovan has worked up to a salary that is roughly six times the figure he earned when he first began his career.

Donovan brings Irish spunk and humor to his work, firmly expressing his conviction that public employment should be available to all on a competitive basis "without fear or favor." He strongly supports the civil service system of employee selection as the best for preserving checks and balances; for giving the taxpayer a better deal.

Donovan is proud that the ration of city employees to city residents in Torrance is one of the lowest in the country, considering the scope of services provided. The caliber of city employees is tops, too, in Donovan's opinion. Everyone from the administrators right down to the humblest maintenance man performs his assigned task so that city government runs smoothly.

Outside of work, Donovan's life centers around his family. Donovan's wife Betty is also a native of Everett. Their three children are Colleen, who plans to attend El Camino College; Patrick, a student at Torrance High; and Monica, a Hickory School pupil.

Although he's neither a "hobbyist" nor a "joiner," Donovan is a leader in two personal associations and enjoys swimming and relaxing at the beach.
